Ermont Could Begin Recreational Marijuana Sales Here By November

By SCOTT JACKSON

The company that has sold medical marijuana at its Quincy dispensary for the past three years could get permission from the state to start selling to recreational customers as soon as November.

Ermont hosted a community outreach meeting July 10 inside the Lincoln-Hancock School on its plans to begin recreational sales from its location at 216 Ricciuti Drive. About 30 residents attended the 90-minute meeting.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, in whose district the store is located, said state law gives Ermont priority over other applicants because the company already has a license to sell medical marijuana. That means Ermont does not have to go through a permitting process with the city, like it did when it first sought to open.

"They have priority access because they were a pre-existing medical marijuana facility, so the way in which this operation and this particular company would proceed toward becoming a retail marijuana site in Quincy will not be replicated," Palmucci said.

"If another entity wanted to open up a retail marijuana facility in the city of Quincy, they would have to follow a different process that would be a little bit more robust in terms of the city component, because they would have to go through the Planning Board process."

Repairs To Red Line Signal Box Seen Completed By Labor Day

By SCOTT JACKSON

Repairs to a signal box damaged when a Red Line train derailed at JFK/UMass station last month should be done by Labor Day as promised, Sen. John Keenan said in a recent interview.

The MBTA could do a better job communicating with its customers, Keenan added, and should have contingency plans in place to better handle delays in the future. The Red Line woes also underscore the need for ferry service at Squantum Point Park, he said.

The Red Line train derailed at JFK/UMass on June 11, damaging a signal bungalow. The damage to the signal box has resulted in delays across the Red Line since then.

The MBTA had already planned to install new signals along the entire Red Line to allow trains to move faster and more frequently, and the upgrading of the signal system has been accelerated.

Keenan Pushing For Flavored Tobacco Ban

By SCOTT JACKSON

Sen. John Keenan is making a full-court press to pass legislation that would ban the sale of flavored tobacco products statewide, which he introduced earlier this year in response to an increase in the number of teenagers who use e-cigarettes.

The Joint Committee on Public Health was scheduled to hold a hearing on the legislation Tuesday afternoon.

"There will be a hearing on that Tuesday," Keenan said in a recent interview. "We expect that there will be testimony from physicians from the American Heart Association, the American Cancer Association and most importantly from young people who feel like they are being targeted by Big Tobacco with these new products."

If approved, Keenan's bill will ban the sale of flavored cigarettes by any retailer or individual in the state. The sale of other flavored tobacco products - including cigars, little cigars, chewing tobacco, pipe tobacco, snuff, and electronic cigarettes, cigars, and hookah, regardless of nicotine content - would be restricted to licensed smoking bars. Products approved by the Food and Drug Administration as tobacco-cessation products or other medical uses would be exempt from the new rule.

No Bail For Woman Charged With Husband's Murder

By SCOTT JACKSON

The 46-year-old woman charged with fatally stabbing her husband on July 4 in Quincy will remain behind bars following her arraignment.

Huixian Liu, age 46, of 67 W. Newton St. in Boston was arraigned on a charge of murder July 12 in Quincy District Court. A not guilty plea was entered on her behalf and she was ordered held without bail.

Liu is due back in court Aug. 13.

Quincy police were called to the area of 10 South Central Ave. shortly before 7 p.m. on July 4 for a report of a stabbing, according to David Traub, the spokesman for Norfolk District Attorney Michael Morrissey.

The victim, Biquang He, age 55, also of 67 W. Newton St. in Boston, was transported from the scene first to Quincy Medical Center, then to Boston Medical Center where he underwent surgery, Traub said; Mr. He died July 7 at Boston Medical Center.

Liu was initially facing assault charges and was arraigned on those charges on July 5 in Quincy District Court. A not guilty plea was entered on her behalf at that time and she was ordered held without bail pending a dangerousness hearing slated for July 12. Prosecutors then charged Liu with murder following her husband's death.

Families Help Dedicate Jean Kennedy, Robert 'Quackie' Lingo's Play Areas

Housing Authority Unveils Two New Playgrounds

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ribbon-cutting ceremonies marked the official opening of a pair of newly renovated playgrounds in Germantown, each dedicated to late residents credited with making an impact on the community.

Officials from the Quincy Housing Authority and representatives from the city of Quincy helped unveil the Jean Kennedy Playground and the Robert "Quackie" Lingo's Taffrail Road Playground the morning of July 10. Kennedy's son and members of the Lingo's family were on hand for the opening festivities, along with dozens of residents who call the neighborhood home.

The Jean Kennedy Playground, located on Doane Street, features a playground area with swing sets and climbing equipment, as well as a half basketball court. The playground on site first opened in 1992 and was rededicated in 2009.

"Jean F. Kennedy was a Snug Harbor legend," said James Marathas, the housing authority's executive director. "She was the mother of six children, devoting a majority of her time to her children and to the life within Snug Harbor."

Kennedy, Marathas said, became a member of the Harborview Residents Committee in 1970; founded the Germantown Drop-In Center in 1974; served as a Girl Scout leader for more than 15 years, helped establish Operation Pride, now known as Cleaner, Greener Quincy; sponsored Christmas parties for Snug Harbor children for more than 40 years; co-founded the Germantown Food Pantry; worked as a receptionist for the housing authority for 24 years; and served on the authority's board of commissioners for 10 years. She was also the precinct warden at the Snug Harbor School for more than 40 years.

Don Kennedy said his mother also organized an annual Fourth of July party for 20 years and had him dress up as a clown. He thanked those present at the dedication for their attendance.

"I'm at a loss for words right now," Kennedy said. "I want to thank you all for coming. It's a fantastic job they did here. It's amazing. Thanks to the Quincy fathers that helped out here and, once again, thank you very much for coming."

Mayor Thomas Koch said Kennedy loved her community and gave back to it.

"I knew Jean. She was a great lady. She certainly gave and gave and to her community, which she so loved," the mayor said.

"To the kids out there, this is a special place being built for you guys. We want you to take care of it, maintain it, keep an eye on it. This is really for your benefit."

Two children who reside nearby — Mecklam "Mecca" Limage and Jean "3 J" Limage III — helped with the ribbon cutting. Marathas said they had been coming by the park each day to see when the basketball court would re-open.

"The time has come — you can play basketball," he said.

The playground on Taffrail Road first opened in

LET THE FUN BEGIN — Local youngsters Mecklam "Mecca" Limage and Jean "3 J" Limage III help cut the ribbon officially opening the new Jean Kennedy Playground on Doane Street in Snug Harbor. Also on hand for the dedication were (from left) Councillor at-Large Noel DiBona, Mayor Thomas Koch, Ward 1 Councillor David McCarthy, Quincy Housing Authority Director James Marathas; and City of Quincy Director of Constituent Services Tom Fabrizio. Don Kennedy, son of the late Jean Kennedy, spoke at the dedication and thanked everyone who contributed to making the playground a reality. "This playground is amazing. It's a fantastic job they did here," Don Kennedy said. The play area features swing sets, climbing equipment and a half basketball court.

THE NEW ROBERT 'QUACKIE' LINGO'S playground was also dedicated at a ceremony July 10. The playground on Taffrail Road features a basketball court and splash pad, the first of its kind in the city. The play area is named for Lingo's, a popular local resident who was fatally stabbed July 31, 1988 while attempting to break up a fight in Snug Harbor. Here his cousin, Colleen Craig, addresses the crowd at the dedication. "I would like to thank everybody involved — the city, the mayor, everybody. It's beautiful, it's awesome. It's so great. Thank you so much, and everybody enjoy it." Looking on are Mayor Thomas Koch, Councillor at-Large Noel DiBona, Ward 1 Councillor David McCarthy and Quincy Housing Authority Executive Director James Marathas.

Wollaston Station Re-Opening Next Month

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Wollaston MBTA station will re-open next month as originally scheduled, following a project to install new elevators and modernize the facility.

Sen. John Keenan said the project to renovate the Red Line station, which began in January 2018, remained on budget and the station is on pace to re-open in August, though the opening date has yet to be announced.

"I go by it and you can really see that it's moving along," Keenan said. "The other morning, I went by it and I thought, 'there are a lot of people standing on the platform, I don't know what they are doing,' and then when I came home later that evening it really struck me that a lot had been done that day. It really looked like it is getting closer to open, so they are moving along with it."

The MBTA is renovating the station, which first opened in 1971, to make it compliant with the Americans with Disabilities Act. The Wollaston station is cur-

Crews Planting Trees Along Washington St.

Over the past few weeks, crews have been working along Washington Street in Quincy Point planting 25 new trees.

With the Fore River Bridge construction now complete, sidewalks along this main road in the Quincy Point community have been replaced and traffic lights have been installed to monitor and maximize traffic flow along Route 3A. In addition, a host of new businesses are now moving in along Washington St. to serve the community.

"The tree plantings are the next right thing as far as the Washington St. corridor," said Ward 2 Councillor and Council President Brad Croall, who spearheaded the idea and worked with Mayor Thomas P. Koch and Natural Resources Commissioner David Murphy to move the effort forward.

25 new trees have been planted including 20 new Summer Snow Japanese Lilac trees along the corridor, 3 new White Oak and 2 Armstrong Red Maples in select locations.

125 new trees are being planted throughout Quincy neighborhoods this summer.

Trees help clean the air and retain water during storms as well as buffer properties from strong winds and sun so they often save property owners money by reducing heating and cooling needs. Trees also lessen street noise and provide habitat for birds.

"We plant trees not for our children's children but for our children's children's children," Mayor Koch said, borrowing from an old Native American adage. The Mayor added: "It's really about the future. How are we going to leave society and can we leave it a little bit better?"

A WELL-DRESSED ANKLE

Ankle bracelets continue to be a popular design trend, and why not? They can be so much versatile! Nothing says glam like a sudden sparkle on your perfectly tanned ankle. They are a charming addition to your bathing outfit and can add sophistication to the most elegant linen pant suit. Diamond anklets may be further enhanced with the addition of a small trinket such as a teeny gold Eiffel Tower or little champagne glass. Small decorative charms are a fabulous reminder of a particular location or romantic vacation. An anklet in snowy pearls with one individual diamond is an appreciative present for a maid of honor. The bridesmaids will enjoy similar ones without the diamond.

Gasoline Prices Up One Cent

Gasoline prices in Massachusetts are up one cent this week, according to AAA Northeast.

AAA's July 15 survey of prices in Massachusetts finds self-serve, regular unleaded averaging $2.70 per gallon. The Massachusetts price is nine cents lower than the national average for regular unleaded of $2.79. A year ago at this time, the average price in Massachusetts was 13 cents higher at $2.83.

"Gas prices over the last week increased for the majority of motorists east of the Mississippi," said Mary Maguire, director of Public and Legislative Affairs. "More expensive crude oil prices, robust demand, and decreasing gasoline supply all contributed to the higher prices." Hurricane Barry appears to have had little impact on average prices across the country.

The range in prices in the latest AAA survey for unleaded regular is 52 cents, from a low of $2.53 to a high of $3.05.

Friday Last Day Submit Nomination Papers

24 Residents Pull Papers As Of Tuesday, Contests Loom For Mayor, City Council, School Committee

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Friday is the last day residents seeking to run for office in this fall's municipal election can submit completed nomination papers to appear on the ballot.

The deadline to submit the papers to the Board of Registrars is 5 p.m. Friday at the City of Quincy Election Office, second floor, City Hall (glass annex building.)

Certified nomination papers, including a statement of candidacy, then need to be filed with the City Clerk's Office by 5 p.m. on Aug. 6.

Each candidate for municipal office must obtain the signatures of at least 50 residents registered to vote in the city. Candidates seeking one of the six ward councillor seats need to gather those signatures from voters who reside within their ward.

As of Tuesday afternoon, 24 residents have taken out nominations papers since they became available in May, setting up potential contests for mayor, school committee and five seats on the City Council.

Two residents have taken out papers to run for mayor. They are incumbent Thomas Koch of 249 Newbury Ave. and Brenda Ryan of 14 Cranch St. Koch, first elected in 2007, is seeking his sixth term as mayor including a second four-year term. Voters approved doubling the term of office for mayor from two to four years in 2013. Koch was elected to Quincy's first four-year mayoral term in 2015.

Three of the six seats on the School Committee are in the hands of voters this fall. Two incumbent members, Paul Bregoli of 80 Willow Ave. and Kathryn Hubley of 44 Marion St., have pulled papers for re-election. They are joined by two other candidates, Courtney Perdios of 86 Ruggles St. and Frank Santoro of 14 Lois Ter., a

READERS FORUM

A Response To McCauley's Op-Ed On Bob Mueller

I wish to respond to Francis X. McCauley's Op Ed (July 11, 2019) "How Bob Mueller Got Even with Donald Trump."

I am currently reading The Mueller Report; though it is not a beach read, it is certainly a Must Read for all citizens who care about our country and all democratic institutions.

Mr. McCauley reiterates in specific numerical detail the quantity of lawyers, investigators, the FBI agents, subpoenas, search warrants, etc employed in the Special Counsel's Investigation. He implies that it was all wasted because Mr. Mueller's Investigation did not prove that President Trump and his crew intentionally conspired with the Russians to determine the outcome of the 2016 Election. Worse, he implies that Mr. Mueller (a Vietnam veteran, lifelong Republican and former FBI Director) has a personal vendetta against Pres. Trump. What hogwash.

I have no respect or admiration for President

Trump whom I consider a grave menace to the United States and our planet; however, can we all agree that it is in fact a good thing to discover that Mr. Trump and his sycophants did not commit treason? Can we also agree that throughout the 2016 election and since, Pres. Trump has never behaved like an honest man?

In all his data points, Mr. McCauley chose to ignore the important fact that Mr. Mueller indicted, convicted, or got guilty pleas from 34 people and companies for such crimes as interference with the 2016 election, witness tampering, lying to the FBI and Congress and more.

Mr. McCauley concedes that he "is not a lawyer." Neither am I - which is why The Mueller Report makes such instructive reading. Did you know that "collusion" is not even a term of art in federal law? President Trump cannot be charged with collusion because that word doesn't exist in the Code of Federal Laws. And so our Reality Star-in-Chief thus misdirects his fellow Americans.

The Mueller Report describes in detail the two ways in which the Russians tampered with the 2016 Election. Yevgeniy Prigozhin, a Russian oligarch known as "Putin's chef," paid for the troll farm named "Internet Research Agency" that exploited and disrupted our social media. If you were ever outraged by some crazy headline on your Facebook or Twitter and responded to it, odds are you were played by the IRA.

No less than TWO RUSSIAN ARMY Cyber units were tasked with hacking computer networks in the U.S. (specifically: the Democratic National Committee, the Clinton Campaign, Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee) and working with Wikileaks to dump emails to disrupt the media's coverage of the 2016 election. Maybe they searched Quincy's Elections Office too.

Why is it that Mr. McCauley and so many of our fellow Americans will not address the facts of foreign interference so effectively shown in The Mueller Report? Why is it that Mr. McCauley can turn a blind eye on these egregious, anti-democratic, foreign-funded schemes to undermine Western Democracies?

Do you, Dear Quincy Sun Reader, think that our electoral process is safer now that Sen. Mitch McConnell has effectively blocked legislation (and funding) to protect our elections across the country? Do you believe that other despotic regimes besides the Russians, such as the Chinese, the North Koreans, and the Iranians are not going to mess with our Elections?

Do your Duty and be skeptical consumers when online. "Fake news" starts with the Trump Administration - not fact-based news media who stand by traditional standards of journalistic integrity and truth.

Wise up.

History Helps Understand True Meaning Of Yakoo

"The farther backward you can look, the farther forward you can see." Winston Churchill

In my homeroom in high school we saluted the flag and recited the Pledge of Allegiance every morning. Each student also had the opportunity to read from the Bible if they wanted to.

Things have changed over the years.

Education and pride in the United States of America have been sanitized. It seems as though everything that made the Greatest Generation great has been eradicated from our social, cultural and economic history. Pride in school, city, state and country once brought us together. Now, individual ideology is tearing us apart by those who act as "morality police."

In 1958 the "Yakoo" mascot was created and adopted by the students of North Quincy High School. Many of the students were first and second generation immigrants in a new country. The mascot was created to reflect the pride in their school by drawing from our Native American history.

The students needed a symbol that expressed commitment to working hard academically and athletically. Through North Quincy High School history, the Yakoo has served as the major force in representing perseverance and commitment to hard work. In portraying hard work the mascot has a tool, a stone hammer, not a weapon. It carries a banner with the school colors representing school pride, not a spear of war. Beyond pride, the symbol represents determination, excellence, leadership and all the good a mascot should reflect.

I graduated from Quincy High School in 1940. While there I ran track to get in shape for my favorite sport, hockey. I was proud to be part of a team that would soon adopt the sculpture "Appeal to the Great Spirit", as a mascot, a Native American. It too has represented pride, determination, excellence and leadership over the years.

I served in World War II as a pilot and have been decorated for flying 33 bombing missions on various planes.

Each of those aircraft were adorned with names and mascots not to offend but to serve as symbols to create pride and determination for our crews and bring us home safely.

Mascots, whether for a school, athletic team or a plane only serve as symbols of good. If they are interpreted as something that offends, the interpreter does not fully understand its true meaning. For those who think Yakoo, in any way, represents something negative they need to look further back in history so that they can see farther forward in its true meaning and all the good that it does.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1920 POSTCARD is a view of the beach in Atlantic that is part of the DCR's Wollaston Beach Reservation. Known as Moswetuset Landing, the pier shown here extended out in the shallow water from near the end of Atlantic Street. At the time, it was a popular public landing where locals kept their boats on floats or moored in the mudflats that are exposed along here at low tide. In 1908 — when the boulevard was opened along Quincy's shoreline — the original small beach here was joined to two other small beaches to become part of the new Wollaston Beach that extended from here south to Fenno Street. Moswetuset Hummock can be seen in the distance in the center of the picture.

Quincy Environmental Fair July 27 At Crane Library

With 20 exhibitors, many freebies and activities for adults and kids alike, and a lineup of local music groups, the Quincy Environmental Fair, cosponsored by Quincy Climate Action Network and the Thomas Crane Public Library, aims to be the biggest green event in Quincy history, says Julie Mallozzi, a QCAN board member and one of the fair's lead organizers.

The fair will take place from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday, July 27, on the lawn of the library at 40 Washington St., Quincy. Admission is free.

Rain date is Aug. 3.

"Many people in Quincy and surrounding towns are worried about climate change and the environment but don't know what to do about them," Mallozzi says. "The idea behind the fair is to bring together groups that are working on these issues locally and can let people know about solutions that are fun and can even save you money."

Environmental fair activities include crafts and seed planting for younger attendees; electric vehicle ridealongs; and a storytelling pirate representing Save the Harbor/Save the Bay. Also on offer at no cost are vegan food samples, raffles for T-shirts and a composter, and the chance to sign up for home energy and rooftop solar assessments and to have free shade trees planted on your property.

In addition to QCAN and the library, the numerous exhibitors include Fore River Residents Against the Compressor Station, Elders Climate Action, Green Energy Consumers Alliance, Harbor Islands Rangers, Quincy Farmers Market, and South Shore Vegans. Also taking part are, Quincy Asian Resources, Eastern Nazarene College environmental science department, two composting businesses, the Quincy DPW, First Parish Church, and Wollaston

Garden Club.

Musical performers will range from a classical chamber group to a teenage pop band.

"If you want to learn more about environmental issues in a relaxed and festive atmosphere, we'd love to see you at the fair," Mallozzi says, adding that the fair is part of a public outreach campaign that also has QCAN tabling at recent and upcoming events, including the August Moon Festival on Aug. 18.

Other upcoming QCAN events include a candidate night in mid-October and films and lectures throughout the year.

$57 Million Project For Quincy Hospital

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the $57 million replacement facility at Quincy City Hospital took place on Wednesday, July 16 at 5:30 p.m. at the hospital.

Mayor Francis X. McCauley, state Sen. Paul D. Harold, the Hospital Board of Managers, and Mark Mundy, director of the hospital, were on hand for the event.

The $57 million project would replace about two-thirds of the buildings and patient beds at the hospital. The new facility would contain 180 medical/surgical, 14 intensive care, and 20 pediatric and 20 mental health beds.

In addition, 25 hospital departments will be housed in the new buildings.

Construction was scheduled to start by mid-August with a completion date in the fall of 1989.

(Editor's note: The facility was completed and opened in mid-October 1989. The hospital closed Dec. 26, 2014.)

HEALTH COMMISSIONER SEARCH NARROWED TO TWO

Quincy's search for a new health commissioner at a salary of $25,000 a year has been narrowed down to two candidates according to Mayor Francis X. McCauley, and a decision could be made within two to three weeks.

McCauley said that Personnel Director David Smith and Administrative Assistant Arthur Foley completed interviews with 14 candidates.

"They are now looking at two strong candidates for the position and will interview them again," said McCauley, who added that their backgrounds will now be checked.

(Editor's Note: A home-rule petition, dropping a requirement of an MD degree was adopted, because of the difficulty finding a medical doctor to take the full-time position for a salary of $40,000 per year.)

George Burke, Family To Receive Volunteer Award

To Be Honored At Father Bill's FoodFest Fundraiser July 30

Quincy attorney George G. Burke and his family have been selected to receive the Richard C. and Virginia A. Welch Dedicated Volunteer Award, an honor presented annually by Father Bill's & MainSpring (FBMS) to a local individual or group dedicated to strengthening their community.

Burke and his family will be presented with the award at FBMS' 25th annual FoodFest fundraiser, which will be held on Tuesday, July 30 at 6 p.m. at The Launch at Hingham Shipyard and Hingham Beer Works. Proceeds from the event, which features a food tasting and auction, benefit FBMS' mission to prevent and end homelessness on the South Shore and across Southern Massachusetts.

Burke, known to many by his basketball nickname "Trigger," is an illustrious figure in Quincy given his basketball accomplishments and esteemed political career. A New England hoops legend, Burke was the all-time leading scorer at the University of Massachusetts Amherst and played for the Boston Celtics. Burke entered public service following his pro basketball career, serving as a Quincy city councillor, a state representative and Norfolk County district attorney. He also served as acting mayor of Quincy.

Through the years, Burke, his wife, Sandra, and their family have been dedicated advocates and supporters of FBMS' mission, among other charitable causes. Burke's contributions to FBMS have totaled more than $100,000, and he and his family have made many in-kind donations to support the individuals, families and veterans served by FBMS.

Throughout his storied life, Burke has achieved countless accolades — for example, the Athletics Hall of Fame at University of Massachusetts Amherst is named after him — and he has rubbed shoulders with some of this nation's most iconic figures, including Bill Russell and the late John F. Kennedy, Jr. One might think that receiving an award from a local non-profit wouldn't be a big deal for someone with such a prestigious resume. However, Burke said he was thrilled when he found out he was receiving the Welch Award at FoodFest, an event that he and his family look forward to every summer.

"I'll treasure this award," Burke said. "Father Bill's & MainSpring does so much good, not only around the City of Quincy but all over the South Shore. They provide for the homeless every single night. They are an amazing organization and do so much good in this community."

The Welch Award has been presented at FoodFest every year since 2013. The award honors the memory of the late Richard C. Welch, the co-founder and President of Dyna-Fab Company and a longtime member of the board of directors at FBMS, and his late wife Virginia. One of the most notable legacies of Richard and Virginia Welch is their spirit of giving that they passed down to their children and grandchildren.

"Considering the multi-generational legacy of giving that's been created by the Welch family, it feels particularly fitting to recognize George and his family with this year's award," FBMS President and CEO John Yazwinski said. "George and his family have been a blessing for our mission. Their contributions and kindness through the years have had a direct impact on improving the lives of thousands of our neighbors in need. The Burke family believes that nobody should be homeless, and through their good deeds they're bringing hope to those who need it most."

FoodFest, returning to the Hingham Shipyard for a fifth straight year, will feature a tasting with samplings from 35 of the South

Shore's most popular restaurants, bakeries and caterers. Guests will also be treated to live music and opportunities to participate in a silent auction, chance raffle and wine pull.

The event has approximately 80 corporate sponsors, including the following Presenting Sponsors: Arbella Insurance Foundation, Bank of America, and United Way of Massachusetts Bay and Merrimack Valley.

FoodFest tickets are $150 per person and can be purchased online at helpfbms.org/foodfest. Funds raised at FoodFest help FBMS close the funding gap in its emergency shelters in Quincy and Brockton.

Father Bill's & Main-

Spring (FBMS) is the leading provider of services to prevent and end homelessness in Southern Massachusetts. The agency, founded in the early 1980s by a group of interfaith and community leaders, helps approximately 6,000 people annually who find themselves homeless, or at risk of homelessness, achieve self-sufficiency. FBMS, a proud partner of the United Way of Greater Plymouth County and the United Way of Massachusetts Bay and Merrimack Valley, is a 501(c)(3) non-profit agency with administrative offices in Quincy and Brockton and program offices throughout Southern Massachusetts. The Fine Print Book Review:

Call It What You Want

By Brigid Kemmerer

By BETH VACCA

I told myself I would lighten things up and read a light and breezy "beach read." I had several ARC's (advanced reader copies) to choose from. Promising looking books with covers adorned with beach chairs, sand and bare feet. I was reminded of two things. One, you can't judge a book by its cover. Two, I can be ridiculously stubborn. I finished several of these "beach reads" before I threw in the proverbial (beach) towel.

Why was every book I was sent centered around an extramarital affair? I am not swayed by the fact that a "soul mate" was found or that a character was "following their heart." This is a subject I do not find light and breezy. I do not want the breakdown of even a fictional marriage tied to my idea of sun, surf and sand.

After more attempts than I would like to admit I decided to go back to some of my favorite genres. Since I do not write negative reviews it had been several weeks since I read a book I felt I could share. Enter Brigid Kemmerer. Kemmerer is the author of "A Curse So Dark and Lonely" series. A series very loosely based on the "Beauty and the Beast" fairytale. I read the first book in this series by accident. I have a rule that I will not begin a series until the author has finished writing the entire series. "A Curse So Dark and Lonely" reinforced my reason why. I am now waiting on the edge of my seat for the next book to be published and will work my entire schedule around its release date. It was that good.

In Kemmerer's newest release, a stand alone young adult novel, "Call It What You Want", we meet two high school students who find themselves socially ostracized for different reasons. Rob is a smart, good-looking and successful athlete who ruled the school. Until his father was caught embezzling client retirement funds and then attempted suicide. Maegan, an AP student and self-proclaimed "nerd" feels the pressure of not living up to family expectations and battles the insecurity of living in her perfect older sister's shadow.

Maegan and Rob are paired together for a Calculus project because no one else would partner with either of them. Their unlikely friendship starts the teenagers on a search for their identities. Maegan must deal with bad decisions made by her that are widely known, but also deal with mistakes and bad decisions within her family that are not so widely known. Rob, on the other hand, must deal with the very public acts of his family and also for the undiscovered bad decisions he is making for himself.

The daughter of a police officer and the son of an embezzler discovering the world is not as black and white as they thought. There are so many grey areas especially when you look beyond appearances. Yes, lesson learned again this summer, you cannot judge a book by its cover.

Not only can we not judge based on appearances we need to be proactive and look deeper. We need to remember there is so much more to a book than just its cover. That people have stories. History. Both good and bad. In this age of social media this lesson is more important than ever. We see what people are posting on line and we think how easy life looks for them. The perfect job. The perfect family. We need to remember that in some form or another everyone struggles. And conversely, when someone is struggling it isn't necessarily connected to direct actions or poor decisions made by them. We need to look past the cover and understand the book.

Don't forget to read ...
The Fine Print.

WHAT'S COOKING

with Marie & Susie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUSIE FALCO

Cookie Kisses

By MARIE

Today's recipe is for a delicious cookie that I found amidst my mother's recipes. It is simple to make and these cookies will melt in your mouth!

Pre-heat oven to 275 degrees; prepare a cook sheet with parchment paper

RECIPE and DIRECTIONS:

½ cup of egg whites
1 cup of powdered sugar
1/8 teaspoon of cream of tartar

1/8 teaspoon of salt
1 teaspoon of vanilla
1 cup chopped nuts (pecans or walnuts)

In a mixing bowl place egg whites, add salt and cream of tartar and beat until stiff. Add ¼ cup of powdered sugar. Fold in rest of the powdered sugar adding the nuts and the vanilla. Mix well. Drop by teaspoons on cookie sheet lined with parchment paper.

Dust each cookie with powdered sugar. Bake in slow oven for 50 minutes then increase heat to 325 degrees until cookies brown lightly.

Simple And Elegant Sorbet

By SUSIE

'Tis the season for sorbets. Fresh fruit sorbets are not only good for you, but delicious and packed with fiber.

The sorbets you get out are normally highly processed and full of sugar and other ingredients that you wouldn't dare put in your blender!

Here is a recipe for a sorbet that is simple and elegant. Great to serve at a party or for a healthy and fun dessert. Kids and grown-ups alike will be asking for more.

The fresh mint leaves not only make the dessert look elegant, but they really elevate the flavor. Strawberries are packed with vitamin C (you get 160% of your daily requirement from just a cup), Folic acid, potassium, and fiber.

When you make things like this yourself, they are also packed with vitamin L, probably the most important vitamin of all.

4 cups frozen strawberries
1/3 cup. organic grape juice concentrate

Fresh mint leaves

Remove frozen strawberries from freezer and thaw 5-10 minutes. Put strawberries and grape juice concentrate into a food processor or powerful blender and puree until smooth and creamy. Adjust sweetness by adding more grape juice concentrate if needed. Serve immediately or refreeze for more solid consistency. Garnish with fresh mint leaves.

Gastric Bypass Surgery: Types, Risks

A Message From Ruth Jones, City Of Quincy Health Commissioner

By RUTH JONES
MSPH, BSN, RN,
BC, CP-FS

Gastric bypass and other weight-loss surgeries create changes to your digestive system to assist you to lose weight by limiting how much you can eat or by reducing the absorption of nutrients, or both. Gastric bypass and other weight-loss surgeries are performed when diet and exercise haven't worked or when you have serious health problems because of your weight.

There are many types of weight-loss surgeries, referred to collectively as bariatric surgery. Gastric bypass is one of the most common types of bariatric surgery in the United States. Many surgeons prefer gastric bypass surgery because it generally has fewer complications than do other weight-loss surgeries. Nonetheless, all forms of weight-loss surgery, including gastric bypass, are major procedures that can pose serious risks and side effects. Also, you must make permanent healthy changes to your diet and get regular exercise to help ensure the long-term success of bariatric surgery.

Types of Gastric Bypass Surgery

- Roux-en-Y gastric bypass (RGB): This operation is the most common gastric bypass surgery performed in the U.S. Initially, a small stomach pouch is created by stapling part of the stomach together or by vertical banding. This limits how much food you can eat. Next, a Y-shaped section of the small intestine is attached to the pouch to allow food to bypass the duodenum as well as the first portion of the jejunum. This causes reduced calorie and nutrient absorption. This procedure can now be done with a laparoscope in some people. This involves using small incisions and generally has a more rapid recovery time.

- Extensive gastric bypass (biliopancreatic diversion): In this more complicated gastric bypass operation, the lower portion of the stomach is removed. The small pouch that remains is connected directly to the final segment of the small intestine, consequently completely bypassing both the duodenum and jejunum. Although this procedure effectively promotes weight loss, it is not as commonly used because of the high risk for nutritional deficiencies.

Gastric bypass surgery that causes malabsorption and restricts food intake produces more weight loss than restriction operations like gastric banding, which only decrease food intake. People who have bypass surgery generally lose two-thirds of their excess weight within two years.

In general, gastric bypass and other weight-loss surgeries could be an option for you if:

- Your body mass index (BMI) is 40 or higher (extreme obesity).
- Your BMI is 35 to 39.9 (obesity); and you have a serious weight-related health problem, such as type 2 diabetes, high blood pressure or severe sleep apnea. In some instances, you may be eligible for certain types of weight-loss surgery if your BMI is 30 to 34 and you have serious weight-related health problems.

Keep in mind that gastric bypass isn't for everyone who is severely overweight. You may need to meet certain medical guidelines to qualify for weight-loss surgery. You likely will have to go through extensive screening procedures to see if you qualify. The process also encompasses making permanent changes that lead to a healthier lifestyle. You may be required to participate in long-term follow-up plans that include monitoring your nutrition, your lifestyle and behavior, and your medical conditions.

Risks of Gastric Bypass Surgery

People who undergo gastric bypass surgery are at risk for:

- Pouch stretching (stomach gets bigger overtime, stretching back to its original size).
 - Band erosion (the band closing off part of the stomach disintegrates).
 - Breakdown of staple lines (band and staples fall apart, reversing the procedure).
 - Leakage of stomach contents into the abdomen (this is dangerous because the acid can eat away other organs).
 - Nutritional deficiencies causing health problems.
- Gastric bypass surgery also may produce "dumping syndrome," whereby stomach contents move too quickly through the small intestine. Symptoms include nausea, weakness, sweating, faintness, and, occasionally, diarrhea after eating, as well as the inability to eat sweets without becoming extremely weak. Gallstones can occur as a reaction to rapid weight loss. They can be dissolved with medication taken after the surgery.

RUTH JONES

Conditions related to nutritional deficiencies can include anemia secondary to the limited absorption of vitamin B-12 and iron, as well as osteoporosis and metabolic bone disease due to the lack of calcium absorption. People who undergo this procedure are required to take nutritional supplements that usually prevent these deficiencies.

The more extensive the gastric bypass surgery, the greater the risk for complications and nutritional deficiencies. Those who undergo extensive bypasses of the normal digestive process require not only careful monitoring, but also may necessitate the lifelong use of special foods and medications.

Ruth Jones is the health commissioner for the City of Quincy.

NORFOLK COUNTY SHERIFF Jerry McDermott testifies before the Joint Committee on Consumer Protection and Professional Licensure July 8th to voice support for a special commission to explore strategies to stop telephone and internet scams targeting the elderly.

Sheriff McDermott Testifies On Beacon Hill To Protect Elderly Residents From Scams

Norfolk County Sheriff Jerry McDermott testified before the Joint Committee on Consumer Protection and Professional Licensure July 8th to voice support for a special commission to explore strategies to stop telephone and internet scams targeting the elderly.

Keeping senior citizens safe is a priority for Sheriff McDermott whose office's TRIAD program is a partnership between senior citizens and local law enforcement organizations to improve communication and better serve the needs of elderly residents. "Of the dozens of senior groups I have met with during my time in office, not once, has the issue of telephone scams not come up," Sheriff McDermott testified. "Suffice to say, I have been inundated with horror stories. These seniors, our friends, family, and constituents are truly scared."

Sheriff McDermott added, "We owe it to this population to do all we can to crack down on those that would take advantage of our seniors, as well as create preventative and awareness initiatives so that our seniors now, and in the future will not become victims."

House Bill 348 calls for the creation of a special commission for the purpose of studying telephone and internet scams targeting elderly residents of the Commonwealth.

Following the hearing, Sheriff McDermott congratulated committee's Co-Chairs Senator Paul Feeney of the Bristol and Norfolk District and state Rep. Tackey Chan of Quincy and the members of the Joint Committee on Consumer Protection & Professional Licensure for shining a spotlight on the issue of scams targeting elderly residents.

Children's Events, Activities At Crane Library July 17 - 23

By JULIE RINES
Children's Coordinator
Crane Public Library

The following events and activities for children are scheduled at the Thomas Crane Public Library July 17 through July 23.

Summer Library Adventure - Universe of Stories

This summer we will be celebrating the 50th anniversary of the Apollo 11 Moon Landing and all things space with our Summer Library Adventure - Universe of Stories. Children ages 0-12 are invited to participate in our summer reading program and join us for two months of free summer activities.

Stop by any Quincy library location, check out our website or download the Beanstack Tracker app to register for our summer reading program. Complete 10 missions and you will be rewarded with a medal at our end of summer medal ceremony.

Visit our summer reading website at thomascranelibrary.org to learn about all of the other fun free activities coming up this summer.

Summer Library Quests

This summer, turn a walk around the library into a scavenger hunt. In the Children's room at the Main Library or at the North Quincy Branch, children can follow directions to hunt for letter clues to spell out a mystery phrase. At Wollaston we'll have hidden pictures to search for, find the picture and find a letter in our mystery word/phrase.

Younger children can search just in the Children's Room; older kids age 10 and up can try their luck with a puzzle that allows them to explore all the floors of the library. This is aimed at children who are able to read, but can be enjoyed by younger ones with the help of a parent.

LEGO Challenge @Wollaston

Are you up for the LEGO Challenge? Join us each Wednesday when we will have a new challenge to tackle and plenty of LEGO to do it! Come in any time between 2 and 4 p.m. and check out the challenge for the week. Can you build a vehicle using only one color of brick? How tall a tower can you make? Can you work with someone else to build a city? Join us and see what you can build every Wednesday this summer!

Pajama Storytime

Join us each Wednesday evening at 6:30 p.m. for a summer-long series of pajama storytimes designed especially for children aged 2-5 and their parents. Join us for 45 minutes of interactive stories, songs, and rhymes. This program is a great time for you and your children to sing, dance, listen, and talk with each other.

Craft: Solar System Necklaces @Wollaston

Would you like to wear the planets around your neck? How about just miniature versions? Children ages 8 and older are invited to join us at the Wollaston Branch Library at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, July 17th to make a special necklace with beads for each of the planets in our solar system. We'll have all the materials as well as charts to show you the order to put them in.

Museum of Science Portable Planetarium

On Thursday, July 18th from 10 a.m. to noon - children ages 5 and older accompanied by an adult are invited to join us in the atrium at the Main Library for a visit by the Museum of Science's portable planetarium.

Discover which stars, planets, and other astronomical wonders are visible this evening. Using the Museum of Science's portable planetarium, we take you on a tour of the solar system and beyond, and provide useful tips on how you can navigate the night sky from your own backyard.

Space inside the planetarium is limited so we will have 3 back to back 30 minute sessions (10, 10:45, 11:30). While you wait for your turn to go inside try your hand at some space science games and activities.

Parents please consider your child's tolerance for dark crowded spaces since once inside the planetarium you cannot get out without disturbing everyone. The program inside the planetarium is a talk so is not really suitable for preschoolers.

Liberated Crafts @North Quincy

Drop into the North Quincy Branch on Thursday afternoon July 18th between 2 and 4 p.m. for crafting without borders. Each week will feature a specific type of craft project, from animal visors to bookmarks, but your child can also use the materials to create something completely new. Our craft for July 18th - Paper plate wreaths.

Preschool Discovery: Space @ Adams Shore

Bring your preschooler, ages 3-5 to the Adams Shore Branch Library on Thursday July 18 at 3 p.m. for some out of this world science. We'll explore meteors, orbits, constellations, our solar system, and more!

Bubble Day

Join us Friday, July 19th from 10 to 11 a.m. at the benches outside the Children's Room windows to blow some bubbles! We will have tubs of bubble solution and plenty of bubble makers to experiment with. Can you make giant bubbles? Little tiny bubbles? Can you make bubbles with your hands or do you need a bubble wand? Find out if a square bubble wand makes square bubbles and grab some bubble solution recipes to try out at home. Parents, this is sure to be loads of soapy, soaking fun so make sure your children are dressed to get messy!

Tinker Time Science: Air and Gravity

On Friday July 19, 2:30 - 3:30 p.m. children of all ages accompanied by an adult are invited to join us at the Main Library for an exploration of the properties of air and gravity.

Air and gravity are all around us but how do they work and can we make them do the things we want?

Can you make a ball float or race from one end of the room to the other?

Parents this is an open ended exploration program. Work with your child to explore these basic scientific principles by posing questions and trying out different things to answer those questions.

This program is sponsored by the Boston Children's Museum through the Linking with Libraries grant from Boston Children's.

Moon Landing Anniversary

Children, teens and adults are invited to join us at the Main Library from noon to 2 p.m. on Saturday, July 20th as we celebrate the 50th anniversary of the 1st moon landing! Make an out-of-this-world craft, take a virtual moonwalk with our VR goggles, and join us for a showing of the actual moon landing! Adults are welcome to join us in our makeshift studio as we record favorite memories and recollections of people who witnessed the moon landing. All recordings will become part of the renowned Story Corps, an American non-profit organization whose mission is to record, preserve, and share the stories of Americans from all backgrounds and beliefs!

Children's Movie Matinee @North Quincy

On Monday afternoons at 2 p.m. this summer at the North Quincy Branch Library join us for a series of children's movie matinees. July 22nd Sherlock Gnomes rated PG runtime 86 min

Story Craft in the Main Library Children's Room

Stop by the Main Library Children's Room on Monday afternoon July 22nd at 2:30 p.m. to hear a space story and do a space themed craft. This program is for children ages 2-6 accompanied by an adult.

Storytelling at Wollaston Beach Playground (Tot Lot)

Join us at the Wollaston Beach Playground Park on the corner of Sachem St. next to the Clam Box across from Wollaston Beach each Tuesday in July at 10:30 a.m. for stories, songs and more.

Stop by to hear a story or two and pick up a calendar listing all of the summer events. If it is raining we will hold storytime at the Main Library on 40 Washington St.

Cosponsored by Discover Quincy

Space Crafts @ Adams Shore

Stop by the Adams Shore Branch on Tuesday afternoon July 23rd to do some crafting any time between 2 and 4 p.m. Each week we will be creating a different space themed craft. Be sure to drop in for some out of this world fun.

Decorating space cookies @Adams Shore

Have some delicious spacey fun as we gather together to decorate star and planet shaped cookies at the Adams Shore Branch Library on Wednesday, July 24th at 2:30 p.m.

Social Security Matters

Will My Canadian Pension Affect My U.S. Social Security?

By RUSSELL GLOOR

AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association Of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: I worked for 15 years in Canada and for 20 years in the USA and I live in the USA. I will get Social Security from the U.S. soon and I suspect that I can get a smaller (20% of US) pension from Canada as well. Does the US claw back (all or part) of a Canadian pension from the US pension amount? Is it possible it's a net loss to apply for Canadian pension? Signed: Dually Entitled

Dear Dually Entitled: The United States and Canada have a bilateral agreement which regulates benefits for people who have worked part of their career in both countries and are eligible for benefits from both. Under this agreement, your Canadian Pension Plan (CPP) benefit, earned independently in Canada, will affect your U.S. Social Security (SS) benefit amount based upon a rule in U.S. Social Security regulations known as the Windfall Elimination Provision (or "WEP").

WEP will not take effect until you start your Canadian pension but will then affect your U.S. Social Security benefit by using a special formula to compute (or re-compute) your U.S. benefit amount. Your U.S. Social Security benefit amount will be based upon your "average indexed monthly earnings" (or "AIME"), which is the inflation-adjusted monthly average for your years of lifetime significant earnings in the U.S. The AIME actually uses 35 years of lifetime earnings, and if you don't have a full 35 years of U.S. earnings they add in zeros to make it 35 years.

To compute your SS benefit, your AIME is broken into three parts, each of which is multiplied by a different percentage to arrive at an amount, which will become part of your "primary insurance amount" (the "PIA" is the amount you get at your full retirement age). If you have 20 years or less of significant U.S. earnings, the WEP formula will take 40% of first part of your AIME as the first of three numbers which will be added together to arrive at your U.S. Social Security benefit (without WEP, the normal formula uses a 90% multiplier). What that would mean, if you first become eligible for U.S. Social Security in 2019, is that the first $926 of your AIME, rather than adding $833 to your SS benefit amount, would instead add $370 (a reduction of $463; thus, your total U.S. Social Security benefit amount would be reduced by $463). But there are some additional things you should be aware of:

- WEP cannot reduce your U.S. benefit amount by more than 1/2 of your Canadian CPP/QPP benefit amount.
- WEP cannot and will not eliminate your U.S. SS benefit.
- If you have more than 20 years of significant U.S. earnings, the 40% multiplier increases by 5% per additional year, which would mean a smaller WEP reduction. The WEP provision does not apply to anyone with 30 or more years of significant Social Security earnings.

tively working to get the bill approved.

"We are actively pushing the bill and we are dealing with the active pushback of the Big Tobacco industry. You may notice that they have put ads in The Boston Globe almost daily and they have been advertising on local Boston radio and Boston TV, saying they are concerned about it, but they are not doing a whole lot other than expressing their concerns," Keenan said.

"We have been meeting with all kinds of people. We have met with e-cigarette flavor manufacturers, we have met with representatives of the convenience stores, we met representatives of vape shops and we've met with principals and teachers and students and parents. We've reached out to a broad base of people and we think the bill is something that should pass and we're going to push to get it as soon as possible."

The FDA in 2018 found the number of high school students using e-cigarettes – defined by use on at least one day in the past 30 days – increased 78 percent, from 11.7 to 20.8 percent, between 2017 and 2018. The number of middle schoolers using e-cigarettes rose by 48 percent over the same period to 4.9 percent of all middle school students.

"We're looking to ban the flavors that are used to entice young people to e-cigarettes and vaping. There are about 8,000 flavors out there and the studies show that is what's attracting young people," Keenan said.

"Young people are vaping in high school – about 20 percent of high school students are doing it regularly and we think that's a pretty conservative number... Young people are vaping at six times the rate of adults. It's really concerning. Year to year, there was a 78 percent increase in high school students who were vaping and a 48 percent increase in the number of middle school students vaping. It's reached the stage where teachers, parents and administrators are just overwhelmed with what's going on and students are really being targeted. This is a way to address it. We think it's the best way."

E-cigarettes have become so prevalent in schools that they are considered a greater public health threat than marijuana, Keenan said.

"When I look at what the immediate threat is to the next generation, it's e-cigarettes," he said. "We've heard that talking with principals and administrators and teachers and athletic directors and coaches. We've asked whether they have seen an increase in use of marijuana, and they have, but e-cigarettes right now are the ones causing them the most concern. That's my focus right now."

The age to purchase all tobacco products, including e-cigarettes, is now 21 in the Bay State. Keenan said the e-cigarette industry has supported raising the age to 21 in other states but has opposed other restrictions such as those he is seeking.

"The industry will say they support that, which is great, but when they are supporting it in other states, they are supporting it with the caveat that they would support raising the age to 21 and there be no other restrictions on their products. They know flavors work and they want to protect their ability to keep marketing flavors to young people," Keenan said.

The federal government banned flavored cigarettes in 2009, Keenan noted, which led to a decrease in the number of teens using cigarettes. That trend ended with the rise of vaping.

"In 2009, flavored tobacco – cigarette products in particular – were banned. Youth use was fairly high at the time. They banned flavored cigarettes [and] youth use dropped pretty dramatically," Keenan said. "Then they introduced flavors through e-cigarettes and all the progress we made in getting youths to quit nicotine products or not to start using nicotine products has been eliminated and the industry is right back at it, drawing young people to their products."

The federal ban on flavored cigarettes did not apply to those flavored with menthol, which would be banned under Keenan's legislation.

"On the menthol side, back in 2009 the industry lobbied enormously down in Washington to keep menthol as a flavored cigarette. I think the CDC numbers suggested almost 350,000 people have died since then as a result of not extending the flavor ban to menthol cigarettes as well," Keenan said.

Recreational Marijuana Sales Could Start By November

pany's CEO, said he plans to submit the application for the retail license to the state Cannabis Control Commission within a week of the meeting. He expects it would take four to five months for the CCC to approve the license, meaning Ermont could possibly begin recreational sales by November or December.

Ermont serves about 255 customers each day, Gates said, and he expects that number would double once recreational sales begin. He anticipates $10 million in recreational sales during the first year, Quincy would receive 3 percent of all retail sales, Gates said, per a host agreement it has reached with the city.

The city also has the option of imposing a 3 percent local tax on recreational sales; legislation to adopt the local sales tax is pending before the City Council. The 3 percent local tax would be on top of the 17 percent tax the state assesses.

Ermont would sell edibles – marijuana-infused food and beverages – to recreational customers, among other products. Chris Yang, Ermont's director of retail, said the company would be required to follow state regulations for edibles, which include child-proof packaging and certain label requirements.

Gates said he understands the importance of not selling marijuana products to children.

"We don't allow the sale of cannabis in any form – whether it is recreational sales or medical sales – to impact children. I'm a father of six kids... and there is research that says that cannabis affects the growing brain in a negative way. We take that responsibility very seriously," Gates said.

"We will never market in any way, whether it is in the form it comes in, whether it is in the way that we talk about it [and] certainly when it comes to seeing minors that might try to approach the facility or try to be on site."

The chief concern for many of the residents who spoke at the meeting was traffic along Ricciuti Drive, including its intersection with Willard Street, at the bottom of the hill, which is located near an exit from Interstate 93.

"We have a major traffic problem entering and exiting Ricciuti Drive," said Mort McGrath. "My concern is how are we going to see an improvement to our [quality] of life."

Palmucci said Quincy studied the feasibility of installing a signal at that intersection a dozen years ago, but the traffic conditions did not warrant a signal at that time. A more recent study showed traffic conditions now warrant a signal there, Palmucci said, and the city has asked the state for permission to go ahead with that plan. The city is prepared to pay for the cost of the signal if necessary, using some of the money it would receive from Ermont.

"We will pay for all of it, if we have to, to make it better, because it needs to be done. It's not the kind of thing that we're going to wait for the state to pay for," Palmucci said. "Some of the money that we would be getting in revenue from this operation would go towards offsetting that cost so it wouldn't result in an increase in taxes."

If Ermont receives permission for recreational sales before the intersection work takes place, Gates said the company would work with the city and state to have a police officer there to direct traffic at peak hours if not all times the store is open. The company would also consider requiring recreational customers to schedule an appointment during peak hours.

Phyllis Speen said she was concerned a signal at the intersection would not be enough to fix the traffic issue and a more substantial solution would be required. Until that time, she said Ermont should not be allowed to go ahead with recreational sales.

"I don't have any issue with what they do," Speen said. "I do have an issue with the added people and volume that's up there."

Eric Doucette said the inside and outside of the classroom by inviting the first 200 educators that registered for the event onto the field for a special ceremony.

More than 200 teachers were recognized during Teacher Appreciation Night, including Mark Chella who teaches at Broad Meadows Middle School in Quincy.

Repairs To Red Line Signal Box Seen Done By Labor Day

ated following the derailment. Keenan said the signal work at JFK/UMass should be done by Labor Day as the MBTA has pledged.

"They are optimistic that it will be, however, they are dealing with a signal system that goes back decades," he responded when asked if it would be done by Labor Day. "I've actually seen the signal box and it looks like something that someone would have made in their basement 40 years ago...so they have difficulty getting replacement parts."

"What they are doing is accelerating the signal upgrade that was in the works. They had plans to upgrade the entire signal system, so they are accelerating that as a result of the derailment. The goal is to at least get the trains running on a signal system by Labor Day. It would be nice if it were sooner and we are pushing them to move it as quickly as they can."

Keenan, who takes the Red Line from Quincy to Boston, said he understands commuters have been frustrated by delays. The T, he said, could do a better job communicating with passengers.

"I take the train myself, so I understand the frustrations with the MBTA, particularly after the derailment. I think people aren't accepting of the derailment, but they realize those things happen. What frustrates them most is the lack of communication from the MBTA relative to that and just on a day-to-day basis," Keenan said.

"We're hearing from constituents now that when they are going to a station, they really have no sense of how long it will be for a train to arrive. Sometimes it will tell you six minutes or seven minutes; sometimes it will tell you a train is three stops away...they don't know what it means in terms of how long it will be before the train gets there. So, I think there is a frustration with the communication from the MBTA about the arrival and the departure of Red Line trains and then I think there is a frustration of when there is a delay and someone is on a train, they are not getting accurate information about how long it is going to be delayed."

"I think the combination of those communication issues really leads to or heightens the frustration of people."

Keenan said he wants the T to have contingency plans in place to use shuttle buses if there are delays in Red Line service in non-emergency situations. There was a long delay on Red Line service headed to Braintree the night prior to the interview, for example.

"There was a long delay and they just weren't told what was happening. One of the persons made the comment, 'why don't they just run buses'... and that was one of the things that we have conveyed to the MBTA - as part of a contingency plan, perhaps they should look at regular busing of individuals when something happens," Keenan said. "They do it, but it never seems to be planned for something short of a major catastrophe. Maybe it should be - if there is going to be a significant delay, then maybe they should look at having buses made available quickly."

"I know there is the issue of rush hour and how the buses move at rush hour, but some of these things occur after rush hour and the trains are still crowded, the roads are relatively clear and maybe they should be running some buses."

The T has allowed commuters to ride the Commuter Rail between Quincy Center and Boston by showing their Charlie Cards since the Wollaston station project began in January 2018; the program will continue until a new garage at the North Quincy station opens next year. Keenan said the Commuter Rail option was not properly communicated to riders following the derailment.

"This goes again to the communication issue," he said. "When the derailment happened, people did not think that they had the Commuter Rail option. The T put on an extra Commuter Rail, so that got people through it. Then, as that special service was taken out, people didn't realize they could continue using the commuter rail into Boston and they didn't know they could continue to use it for the next roughly year until the garage is finished in North Quincy."

"We've tried to communicate that to constituents through our Red Line updates we send out. We've asked the T to do a better job of communicating that people."

Once passengers knew they could ride the Commuter Rail at no extra cost, more began to do so, which causes problems of its own.

"It seems to be working because the Commuter Rails are pretty full, and that's becoming an issue now. Red Line ridership immediately after the derailment was down about 10 percent. It's down, I think, the last week of June still by about 4 percent. I think a lot of those riders have moved over to Commuter Rail and it's very difficult to get on the Commuter Rail now," Keenan said.

"That's got to be addressed. They have to find another way to get people to Boston. It could be by using buses, perhaps in the HOV lane, or it could be done by moving a substantial number by ferry from Squantum Point Park."

Quincy and Winthrop have partnered in recent years to provide ferry service between Boston and Squantum Point Park, but the boat Winthrop purchased, The Valkyrie, has been sidelined in recent weeks because of engine problems. Keenan said a more reliable service is needed.

"Getting a more reliable provider there is something we're pursuing. They would be able to give more regular service on a better schedule and a more reliable service than what has been provided to date," Keenan said.

"Ferries have proven to be very cost effective compared to other modes of public transportation and it just makes sense to me - we have a 750-car parking lot and a pier - that a ferry should be running from downtown Boston to there for South Shore residents."

"When you think about who could benefit most, people of Marina Bay, people of Squantum, people of North Quincy, Wollaston - pretty much all the neighborhoods of Quincy," Keenan added. "That would be a pretty viable option."

"Although I do agree with you that if you have a Patriots game and you have certain other things going on it does create traffic in certain areas, this particular location in general...has a treacherous track record and unfortunately it is going to get worse when this opens," Mahoney said.

Kathy Deady said she was concerned allowing recreational sales would lead to children using marijuana.

"I think it having it be recreational just says to the kid...it's OK," Deady said. "It's OK to have it and it's OK to use it - smoke it, eat it, vape it, do whatever you want with it - and those kids will get it from their older brothers and sisters. They will. They do it now, especially the vaping."

Jeff Burke said he supported Ermont's proposal for recreational sales.

"I think it's really good what you're doing. I don't think it's bad for the community and we've waited a long time for this," he said.

Recreational sales of marijuana were approved in a 2016 statewide referendum, which 51 percent of voters in Quincy supported. Because a majority of Quincy voters approved the ballot question, the mayor and City Council cannot ban marijuana establishments outright. The city would also be required to license

ONE DAY'S WORK – This is how the site of the former Sterling Middle School on Granite Street appeared on Saturday, one day after demolition started at the closed school. The razing process is expected to continue at least for several more weeks. Behind the rubble and partially torn down walls is the new $59 million South West Middle School that opened last month.

Demolition Continues At Former Sterling Middle School

Demolition of the former Sterling Middle School which closed last month making way for a new middle school serving South West Quincy began July 13 and is expected to continue for several more weeks.

Workers for NASDI, the contractor hired to raze the 92-year-old middle school, had made considerable progress as of Saturday – just one day into the demolition process. Excavators could be seen from Granite Street moving rubble and tearing down the exterior exposing portions of the longtime academic building and neighborhood landmark that stood since 1927. Passersby traveling by foot, car and motorcycle stopped to witness history and the end of a chapter in the local community.

Looming behind the work site is the new $59 million South West Middle School which opened last month. The state is reimbursing the city $28 million for the cost to construct the new school.

South West Middle School has classroom space for 430 students in grades 5-8 and features new field space, expanded parking on Roberts Street side of the building and a separate entrance for fifth grade students.

The space made by razing the old school will add parking to the new middle school as well as a dedicated lane for bus travel.

WORKER FROM NASDI, the contractor hired to demolish the closed Sterling Middle School, hoses down some rubble as an excavator moves debris at the work site on Granite Street Saturday.

Wollaston MBTA Station Re-Opening Next Month

rently the only station on the Red Line not in compliance with the ADA. The project will also address other concerns commuters have had regarding the station, such as flooding in front its entrances.

"That is the last one to be made ADA-compliant, which is critical," Keenan said. "We had a woman who lived in Wollaston Center to advocate for different issues, particularly for those with disabilities. She would have to go by wheelchair from Wollaston Manor to North Quincy train station.

She was a strong proponent of closing the station to get it done as quickly as possible. There are people who have not had access for a long time, so they will have access as it should be.

"It's a vital part of the neighborhood. It impacts people's ability to get to work. Having a new station that they know won't be closed because of flooding issues, won't be closed because of escalator issues, won't be closed because of an electrical issue, knowing that station is state-of-the-art and open is really important to people."

In addition, Keenan said the renovated station should help advance efforts to revitalize Wollaston Center.

"I think it's going to trigger interest in Wollaston Center," he stated. "Wollaston Center has a lot of empty storefronts right now. The opening of the train station should prompt merchants and others to come into Wollaston station and start their businesses there and for residents to move into the area as well.

"There is a whole host of benefits to that station opening and we're excited to see it happen."

The T presently has no plans for development at the Wollaston station parking lot, Keenan said, but that could be on the table in the future.

"There is nothing, as far as I know, planned right now. My expectation is at some point they may make that lot available for development," he said.

"They are in the process of resurfacing it. They've put in a new sidewalk for access to Wollaston station through the parking lot. They've planted trees in the parking lot and around the perimeter of the parking lot.

"That is what the focus is right now – getting the station open, getting it back online, making sure people are aware of that and have access to it. Any decisions relative to development will come at a later time."

up to seven recreational shops — one for every five liquor stores in the city.

Mayor Thomas Koch in February 2018 introduced a zoning ordinance — still pending before the City Council — regulating where pot shops would be able to open in the city. The proposed ordinance, which is similar to an approved ordinance concerning medical marijuana dispensaries, would in essence limit recreational stores to the vicinity of Quarry Hills, Crown Colony and the Fore River Shipyard.

Councillor Nina Liang, the chairwoman of the council's ordinance committee, said she expects a vote on the zoning ordinance would take place in the fall after councillors return from their summer recess. The goal is to ensure the ordinance does not run afoul of state regulations.

"We want to make sure that everything we're doing to protect the residents of the city are going to be able to fly and not potentially open us up to any lawsuits," Liang said. "I would encourage folks when we reconvene in the fall to meet on this to come to the meetings."

Jean Kennedy, Robert 'Quackie' Lingoes Play Areas Dedicated

1970, Marathas said. The newly renovated space features a basketball court and splash pad, the first of its kind in the city.

Robert "Quackie" Lingoes, for whom the playground was named, was fatally stabbed on July 31, 1988, while attempting to break up a fight in Snug Harbor. He was 18 years old.

"Quackie was a resident of Quarterdeck Road in Snug Harbor and the son of Patty Lingoes. He was loved deeply by his mother," Marathas said. "Quackie was a student at the Quincy High Vo-Tech School and received a degree in plumbing. He was known for his smile throughout Germantown and his bright, yellow, smiling tattoos.

"Quackie lost his life as a hero. He stepped in to break up a fight and unfortunately lost his life in doing so."

Colleen Craig, Lingoes' cousin, said the new playground would keep his memory alive.

"Unfortunately, I never had the privilege to meet Quackie, but I've heard so many stories and so many great things from strangers," Craig said. "This is such an amazing way to help Quackie's memory live on and I know he would have loved it."

"On behalf of the whole Lingoes family, I would really like to thank everybody involved - the city, the mayor, everybody," she added. "It's beautiful. It's awesome. It's so great. Thank you so much, and everybody enjoy it."

Koch said Lingoes' memory will live on in the community where he grew up.

"There is saying that no man is dead if they are remembered. This continues remembering Quackie for the great individual he was," Koch said. "They are the areas - these are the grounds - he ran around and played in. It is very appropriate we remember him; he will be forever remembered at this site for his contributions to this community.

"To his family, we say thank you for being here and we remember Quackie in our thoughts and prayers today."

Dozens of children were on hand for the ribbon-cutting ceremony, eagerly awaiting the chance to play in the splash pad on the 90-degree day. Among those children was Camilla Marsters, along with her grandfather Steve Marsters, a special projects coordinator for the housing authority.

The Quincy Housing Authority received a grant from the Massachusetts Executive Office of Energy and Environmental Affairs and

"The commitment from the Executive Office of Energy and Environmental Affairs and the city of Quincy to the Quincy Housing Authority and its residents is demonstrated through out the 1,600 units that we serve and the over 5,200 residents that the Quincy Housing Authority houses," Marathas said.

"We're grateful for having a mayor and a city that understands the importance of working with public housing to ensure the highest level of service available to our residents and the many people who depend heavily upon those services that we provide."

Ward 1 Councillor David McCarthy (credited Marathas and Koch for working together to help improve the quality of life for Snug Harbor residents.

"It's a true team effort. James Marathas has come in here and done a tremendous job and I know the partnership that he has with Mayor Koch is outstanding," Mc-Carthy said. "I try to keep my eye on the ball down here as much as I can to improve everything, and with James' leadership it is really easy. He's done a great job here."

Councillor Noel DiBona said the Germantown neighborhood has improved greatly during Marathas' tenure with the agency.

"James Marathas, since he's come on, I've seen a big improvement here in Germantown," he said. "Let's give a round of applause for James Marathas."

Have you heard about the International Space Station (ISS)? It is an amazing science laboratory orbiting 254 miles above the Earth. It was built with the cooperation of Japanese, Russian, Canadian, European and U.S. space agencies. Pieces of the ISS were rocketed into space over 40 different missions, and put together while in orbit.

The ISS is about as long as a football field and is usually home to six astronauts at a time. The astronauts live in the ISS for about six months!

While aboard the ISS, astronauts study everything from deep space mysteries to the human body. It is a special laboratory, because experiments can be done in microgravity (very weak gravity).

Apollo 11 'Moonships' Were Created Here

Quincy's Important Contribution To Historic Moon Landing 50 Years Ago

By WAYNE G. MILLER
Quincy Historical Society

While Quincy would never be confused with the Goddard Space Flight Center or Houston Mission Control in importance, the epic moon landing of July 20, 1969, could not have happened without a large contribution from Quincy. Now that the 50th anniversary of the Apollo 11 mission is upon us, it is time to celebrate three Apollo Instrumentation Ships that were constructed at the Fore River Shipyard to track, communicate with, and guide the spacecraft on the correct trajectory to the moon, some 240,000 miles from Earth.

Planning for the moon landing had started five years before, just after General Dynamics Corporation purchased the Fore River Shipyard from Bethlehem Steel on Jan. 1, 1964. The ships would be seagoing counterparts to NASA's Mission Control at Houston, TX. Since the ships would be too costly to build from scratch, General Dynamics would have to hunt down old World War II tankers able to house 450 tons and $35 million worth of electronics equipment apiece.

When Lewis Emmerich, program director of Apollo Instrumentation Ships for General Dynamics, found the first ship in Norfolk, VA, he was horrified by its condition. Having been mothballed by the U.S. Navy since 1957, the rusted hulk seemed more suitable for scrapping than retrofitting, but Emmerich needed the ship and he had it towed to Quincy along with two additional relics discovered in Texas. Emmerich USNS REDSTONE served as an instrumentation ship during the Apollo 11 Moon Landing July 20, 1969 - 50 years ago this week. Redstone and two other instrumentation ships - Mercury and Vanguard - were former tankers that were stripped down and converted into complex, integrated, electronics ships at the former Fore River Shipyard in Quincy. These "Moonships" also played integral roles in future space programs. The photo above shows the Redstone at Pearl Harbor around 1968.

had secured T-2 tankers Mission de Pala, Mission San Juan, and Mission San Fernando which were renamed respectively USNS Redstone, Mercury, and Vanguard by General Dynamics. USNS stands for United States Naval Ships: non-commissioned ships that are property of the US Navy but manned by civilian personnel.

Late in 1964 each ship was put into dry dock to cut out the 303-foot midsection, an area containing tanks that once held five million gallons of oil. The new 375-foot midsection lengthened the ships to 595 feet and broadened the beams from 68 to 75 feet. In the shipbuilding trade, this process is called "jumboizing." Salvaging the bows and sterns of the old tankers saved the government about $50 million. The new midsection now had room for electronic and communications equipment, three lounges, physical training room, workshops, storage facilities for spare parts, conference rooms, technical library, photographic laboratory, and living facilities for a crew of 88 and 122 instrumentation personnel.

Turning the stripped-down tankers into complex, integrated, electronics ships would take the Fore River Shipyard almost three years to complete. By 1968 the three ships were working in concert in separate oceans to prepare for the moon landing mission scheduled for the following year. Apollo 11 would be the big one; fulfilling President Kennedy's goal set forth in his speech to Congress on May 25, 1961. "First, I believe that this nation should commit itself to achieving the goal, before this decade is out, of landing a man on the moon and returning him safely to the Earth. No single space project in this period will be more impressive to mankind, or more important for the long-range exploration of space; and none will be so difficult or expensive to accomplish."

Although the Apollo program had land stations around the world, it was critical to have ships strategically located in the vast expanse of the oceans to monitor the spacecraft when its orbital path passed overhead. The decks of the ships had an array of large, dish-shaped antennas which helped guide the astronauts on their flight to the moon. Stationed between Bermuda and Antigua, the Vanguard covered the initial booster phase of the mission on July 16, 1969. About nine minutes after liftoff, data from the ship guided the spacecraft into a parking orbit about 100 miles above the Atlantic Ocean. When the proper altitude and velocity were reached, Houston was advised to start the Saturn 4B rocket "burn" to send the spacecraft into Earth orbit.

The Redstone was positioned in the western Pacific Ocean near the equator, and the Mercury between land stations in Australia and Hawaii. The ships tracked Apollo 11 above the oceans during Earth orbit and provided telemetry reports on the physical condition of the astronauts and the functioning of their spacecraft. The "go - no go" decision fell upon the Redstone and Mercury and once it became "go," a reignition burn of the Saturn 4B rocket increased the velocity of Apollo 11 from 17,400 to 24,300 miles per hour, sending it into trajectory toward the moon. At this point, communications relays were taken over by land-based stations in Australia, California, and Spain. On July 24, as Apollo 11 neared Earth, Quincy's ships resumed monitoring.

After the success of Apollo 11, there was more work to be done by the ships. The Vanguard continued on through Apollo 17, the final Apollo mission (1972); Skylab, the first US space station (1973-1974); and the joint US/Soviet Apollo-Soyuz Test Project (1975). In 1980 she was reconfigured as a Navigational Test Ship, checking submarine navigation systems, and finally stricken in 1999. In addition to the Apollo program, the Redstone worked on Skylab tracking (1973-1974), Viking 2 Mars Probe (1975), and the Space Shuttle Program (1979 to the early 1990s). She was struck in 1993. The Mercury was sold in 1970 to Matson Navigation Co. for conversion to a bulk carrier and renamed SS Kopaa. She was scrapped in 1984.

These three moonships (as General Dynamics called them) were the only ones built for the space program at the Fore River Shipyard. They left their mark on millions of television viewers and radio listeners who heard the voices of the astronauts from afar, in broadcasts relayed by way of ships built in Quincy.

Three Astronauts, One Astronette

Three Quincy Babies Born On 'Moon Day'

Three newborn "Moon Babies" are being born in Quincy today. The three new Quincy citizens, born at Quincy City Hospital on July 20 when the moon landed on the moon, have been named after the moon landing's most successful achievement.

American's three astronauts almost had a near-miss in Quincy baby boy, Mr. and Mrs. James Vennema's son, James Christopher, could very well have been named something like Neil Michael, according to members of a local committee of relatives, friends, and acquaintances. The Vennema live at 24 South Ave.

Quincy also had its first "moonshot" Lin Marie Del Greco, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Del Greco, 52 Town Hill St., most curiously would have been named after the astronauts in a twinship fashion if her name had not been selected before she was born. In fact, according to grandmother, Mrs. Eileen De Greco of 75 Gilbert St., even if the parents decided not to name Lin after the astronauts, "I would have."

And the Arthur Perkins' on this crowded day in man's history became the proud parents of a baby boy. The Perkins, who reside at 210A Quincy Shore Drive, named their son, Frederick Joseph.

Who knows, he may become an astronaut anyway.

Initial $10-$15 Tax Cut

Montclair Project Hailed As 'New Era' For Quincy Growth

The $100 million commercial-residential complex to be built in the North Quincy Montclair marsh area was hailed today as "the birth of a new era of unprecedented growth and prosperity for Quincy."

State Street Bank and Trust Company unveiled its plans Tuesday for development of the 80-acre site confirming earlier reports in The Quincy Sun.

The initial phase, calling for an operations-data processing-logistics center will cost an estimated $40 million.

Bank officials said the operations center is expected to serve as the nucleus of a service and residential complex which will include:

- Additional office buildings.
- Retail stores.
- An apartment complex.
- A marina and other recreational facilities.

The entire complex is expected to be completed in the early 1980's.

Other sources estimated that eventual development in the area could reach the $200 million mark.

Mayor James R. McIntyre greeted the State Street Bank and Trust plans today.

"This new development which represents the largest single property valuation in our city's history, joins many others in advancing the horizons of our city's growing economy and tax base."

He estimated the first phase of the development alone will reduce the tax rate between $10 and $15.

William A. O'Donnell, executive vice-president of the Quincy-South Shore Chamber of Commerce declared:

"It is a stupendous development which along with the MBTA

Burke's Drug Bill Sent To Governor

Norfolk County Dist. Atty. George G. Burke of Quincy reportedly has passed the way for a coordinated battle against the illegal use of narcotics.

A bill filed at Burke's request to create Drug Education Bureau is the office of district attorney, throughout the state, was passed this week by the House and Senate.

It has been sent to Gov. Sargent for his expected approval. The bill provides for a two-man bureau in each office-one as educator, the other an investigator-at a salary of $10,000 each.

The commissioners of each county, however, have to approve the salary appropriation. Burke, who has spearheaded a Norfolk County-wide campaign against the use of narcotics by adults and teenagers, said Norfolk commissioners have already given their approval to set up a bureau in his office.

"This is a very serious social problem and it is not just going to go away by itself," Burke said.

"We have got to fight those who are peddling drugs to our teenagers and to educate the youngsters against the harm they are doing themselves by experimenting with drugs."

"I think this bill is a big step in the right direction."

Burke said his bureau would coordinate and assist drugs investigations and education in Quincy and other communities in Norfolk County.

Mayor Receives $69 For 'Spirit Of '69' Drive

A $69 check has brought the "Spirit of Sixty-Nine" kidney disease fund-raising campaign to over the $100 mark in Quincy.

The check was sent to Mayor James R. McIntyre by William H. Scott of Scott Prescott Corp., 21 Intervale St., South Quincy.

Mayor McIntyre and mayor of the other 35 cities in Massachusetts are spearheading the drive to raise $202,800 to expand life-saving treatment programs with the artificial kidney machine.

If successful, the campaign will prolong the lives of an estimated 200 Massachusetts residents who are otherwise doomed this year because of shortage of personnel to operate artificial kidney machines in local areas.

Massachusetts residents are asked to send 69-cent contributions to their mayor at City Hall during the 49-day fund-raising program which will run until early September.

The other contributions received at Quincy City Hall have been 69-cent donations.

Morrisette Rallies To Defeat Hyde Park, Tied For 1st In Div.

By TREVOR WENNERS

This was a true character win for the Morrisette American Legion Post 294 baseball team.

During a game where hits were difficult to come by with a total of 14, Hyde Park Post 78 took a 3-1 lead in the top half of the 12th, but then Morrisette dug deep and put a three spot on the board in the bottom of the 12th to secure a 4-3 win during a three-hour game with five extra innings at Adams Field Monday.

The win was a crucial one for Post 294 (13-4), as it put the unit in a tie for first in the East Division of the American Legion District 6 standings with Hyde Park (13-4). Not only was it a grueling game against Post 78, but it was also the second game of a doubleheader for Morrisette — with the first game being a 9-2 win against visiting Cohasset.

The doubleheader sweep obviously has huge playoff implications, but it also allows Morrisette to move on from a difficult 2-4 stretch after starting the season, 9-0.

"For these kids to show up here at 3 p.m. and play a game until 5, take a half hour or 45 minutes to sit down and eat lunch, and then come out and play the No. 1 team in the league for 12 innings to a 4-3 game talks about the character of this team all day long," said Morrisette coach Steve Maze. "These guys laid it all on the line (Monday) to give me everything they had, and I could not be prouder as a coach."

The pitchers were the biggest stories on both sides of the field, as Quincy starter Brandon Sullivan went six strong innings, giving up only two hits and one earned run. He threw no-hit action through three innings, while striking out four, hitting one, and walking one. Owen Carberry threw 5 1/3 innings of relief for the hosts, giving up two runs with only one being earned in the 12th, while striking out three and walking two.

For Hyde Park, starter

Kevin Zarnach went 4 1/3 innings, giving up one run in the fourth and allowing four hits in total, while whiffing two, hitting one, and walking one.

Hyde Park tried to deliver the knock-out punch with a two-run 12th. Kevin Bruen led off with a single up the middle, and then a sacrifice bunt by Reo Shimbori advanced Bruen to second with one down. A single to right by Chris Bear created some problems for Morrisette, as Morrisette tried to throw Bruen out at third after he made a wide turn, but a throwing error scored Bruen and allowed Bear to advance all the way to third. During the ensuing at-bat, a one-run single through the left side by Connor Bertsch put the squad up 3-1.

Maze made a call to the bullpen and inserted Mark Flynn, which proved to be the right call. Flynn forced Sean Russell to ground into a 4-3 double play to end the inning, which ended up being a big deal in the bottom half of the inning.

Morrisette's rally in the 12th started with a one-out single to right by Michael Roche, and then Stephen Parsons drew a walk during the next at-bat. Roche and Parsons advanced to third and second, respectively, on separate steals. Zachary Hatfield was hit by a pitch, loading the bases with one down. A fielder's choice RBI by Matthew Joyce allowed Roche to cross home, cutting the deficit down to 3-2 with two outs. A walk to Martin McCormack once again juiced the bases, and then Curtis Frazier extended the game by reaching on an error by the second baseman with Parsons crossing home with the game-tying unearned run. Matthew Tomlinson then picked up the game-winning RBI walk, as Joyce tallied the game-winning run.

"In baseball, it is a snowball effect," said Maze. "One guy gets on and then another guy gets on, and it becomes contagious. Guys started getting on by walks and when you get up there you start feeling confident. I told these guys that I do not care if it is a home run to walk-off or a walk to walk-off; a win is a win."

Hyde Park opened the scoring in the top half of the fourth. Sam Petitpas led off with a single to left, and then crossed home three batters later on an RBI double to right-center by Russell.

Frazier answered the bell for Morrisette, tallying a double to left in a lead-off role during the bottom of the fourth. A passed ball allowed him to advance to third, and then he scored from third on an attempted double steal, while Tomlinson was gunned out at second.

"It was a hard-fought game and hitting came alive at the end," said Sullivan. "We did not hit much in the middle innings and had a few bumps defensively, but we battled through it. We did not panic for a second when they went up 3-1. We have a lot of heart on this team and that is what helped us get those runs in the 12th."

On Tuesday, July 9, at approximately 01:08 a.m., Officers Reilly, Cox and Sorgi were dispatched to a Quincy Shore Drive address for a report of a family disturbance.

Upon arrival, officers met with the victim in the yard. She stated she was just "beat up and choked" by her boyfriend. She was visibly upset and crying. She confirmed her boyfriend was still in the house and moments later the boyfriend appeared in the yard. He immediately began yelling at the victim demanding to know why the Police were there.

At this point Officer Sorgi and Officer Cox detained the boyfriend while Officer Reilly interviewed the victim who stated the following:

She went out with a male friend earlier in the evening and they returned home and had a few drinks with the boyfriend. Everything was going smoothly and the two males seemed to get along well - namely that her boyfriend didn't display any "jealous" behavior the whole evening."

As the evening came to a close, her male friend left and this is when her boyfriend suddenly "flipped out," calling her a whore and accusing her of cheating on him. He kept up this aggressive and intimidating behavior until she said that she was leaving for the night and went upstairs to pack.

When she came back down, there were numerous beer bottles smashed on the kitchen floor. Her boyfriend then attacked her, slapping her in the face at least three times. As she tried to defend herself, her boyfriend grabbed her neck, then squeezed with both hands to strangle her. She said that he did this twice during the attack and both times she couldn't breathe. She added that she was in fear for her life.

As she struggled to fight to get away, the boyfriend took a Neutrogena Astringent Bottle that was on the kitchen counter and dumped most of the contents of the bottle on her clothing. He then took a green BIC lighter and tried to ignite the substance on her while yelling, "I'm going to light the alcohol in this! "I'm going to set you on fire and kill you!"

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

LT. DAN MINTON

She said she was able to break free, run up the steps and hide in the upstairs bedroom. She immediately called her sister who was the person to call the police moments later. The suspect, a 33-year-old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest and charged with domestic assault and battery, strangulation, and armed assault to murder. The victim was examined by Brewster Ambulance EMTs however, she refused further medical treatment. Photographs of the marks on her neck were taken to show the strangulation marks.

Officer Cox located the green BIC lighter which was taken as evidence. The empty bottle was also taken as evidence.

Once the situation was stabilized, Officer Reilly learned from the victim that they had been together for about a year and he has been violent towards her in the past. She said he would hit her occasionally and sometimes choke her during his episodes when he gets angry but that this was a "rare" occurrence. She said she was unsure if his violence is triggered by alcohol abuse or some sort of mental health problem. She added that she hasn't sought help for the abusive situation she finds herself in because he hasn't been violent towards her in about six months and she thought that things were going good. This was the most violent she has seen him and she was having second thoughts about her relationship with him.

She gathered some possessions and said she was going to stay at her sisters. Officer Reilly advised the victim about domestic violence resources including restraining orders options against her boyfriend. She did not want any services at this time, however, Officer Reilly noted in his report that it was imperative that a court advocate reach out to the victim to urge her to take preventive/protective steps.

Nice Work!

NICE WORK goes out to Lt. Kennedy and members of the SWAT team, who along with officers of the Patrol Division, were able to assist a former soldier from harming himself or others. The victim stated he had suicidal and homicidal thoughts from post-traumatic stress. Negotiators were able encourage the victim to accept help and the incident ended ideally!

SOME TRAVEL SCAMS: Vacationers are often primary targets of criminals for one big reason - if the criminal is caught, depending upon the distance between the crime and the victim's residency, it may be unlikely that the victim will return to that location to testify. Vacationers often let criminals know via style of dress, cameras, etc. that they are new to the area and unaware of crime trends. Here are a few current scams:

FREE FRIENDSHIP BRACELETS: This scam is big in European cities, especially around the major attractions and often targets female travelers.

A friendly stranger will approach you and attempt to tie a 'free' bracelet around your wrist. Once attached, the person will then demand money for the bracelet and create a scene if you refuse to pay. A variation of this is the scammer offering a magic trick that results in the bracelet appearing on your wrist or fingers in seconds. Avoid this by walking past anyone that you deem to be suspect and keep your hands in former school committee member.

Six residents have taken out papers to run for the three at-large seats on the City Council. They include all three incumbents – Noel DiBona, 70 Chickatabot Rd., Nina Liang, 2 Williams St., and Anne Mahoney, 12 Ferriter St. – and challengers William Burke, 28 Rice Rd.; Frank Rubino, 5 Whiton Ave.; and Joann Sullivan Cantor, 316 Fenno St., who took papers out on Monday.

Three residents have pulled papers to run for the Ward 1 seat on the City Council. They are incumbent David McCarthy of 48 Whitney Rd., Danielle Kempe of 1 Adams St. and Joseph Murphy of 18 Macy St.

In Ward 3, the incumbent, Ian Cain of 8 Highpoint Cir., has taken out papers to seek re-election. Eriberto Soto Jr. of 627 Adams St. has likewise taken out papers to run for the seat.

Three residents have pulled papers to run for the open Ward 5 seat on the City Council; incumbent Kirsten Hughes announced earlier this spring she would not seek re-election in the fall. The three residents to pull papers for that seat are: Christopher DeCambra of 25 Langley Cir.; Mary Lally of 10 Weston Ave.; and Charles Phelan, a former councillor, of 298 Fenno St.

In Ward 6, incumbent William Harris of 74 Ashworth Rd. has taken out papers to seek re-election. William Isenberg of 36 Carle Rd. has also pulled papers for that race.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, 92 Viden Rd., and Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, 16 Cross St. have also pulled papers to seek re-election. No challengers had emerged for either seat as of Tuesday afternoon.

A preliminary election would be required if there are more than two candidates for mayor, more than two candidates for ward councilor and more than six candidates for councilor at-large or school committee.

The preliminary election would be held Tuesday, Sept. 10. The final election is scheduled for Nov. 5.

Downtown Construction Activities

Proposed work activities for the week of July 14th, 2019

- There will be a concrete pour for the lower level under the parking garage structure this upcoming week. The concrete pour is scheduled to begin at 5:00am. There will be small and large concrete placements from July thru December for the 15-story Chestnut Place building on a weekly basis.
- The façade work on the Nova Residence at 1500 Hancock Street continues around the building with various materials being installed. NGRID Gas and Comcast will be installing their conduits within the next couple of weeks between their building and the former Payless Shoe Source. Keep an eye out for pedestrian and vehicular detours during the installation process.
- Drainage work continues along the west side of the new garage. Raising of the grade on the backside of the Nova Residence building is expected to start this week and continue thru the month of August.
- Deck forms continue to be installed over the lower level of the garage working their way toward the new City atrium. Post tension cables are being installed over the first half of the deck forms. A concrete pour on the first half of the garage roof for the lower level closest to Chestnut Place is expected to take place over the next couple of weeks.

(The photo's above show what you can see and what you can't see with the construction of the new civic plaza/lower parking level. The top photo shows worker installing Doka deck sections, rebar and post tension cables. The bottom photo, work you can't see, shows supports, lally columns and bracing which is holding up the Doka decks. Once the concrete is poured and sets up the post tension cables are placed under tensions. Once the concrete has reached its prescribed strength then the Doka decks and supports get removed in the lower parking level.)

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your honesty is, as always, admirable. But you might want to be more tactful in discussing a sensitive issue with a family member. Remember: You can give advice without giving offense.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An unexpected workplace snag should be handled quickly and efficiently so that it leaves you time for family get-togethers. Also, you might soon get that long-sought apology.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Aspects favor family matters, especially where children might be involved. Spending time with loved ones helps restore some much-needed balance to your typically busy schedule.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) That seemingly clear-cut agreement might not be quite so straightforward after all. Recheck for language that could make you liable for hidden costs and other unpleasant surprises.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Careful, Kitty. Better to deal with someone with proven reliability than with a big talker who promises much but can't confirm that he or she will deliver. Your social life really zings this weekend.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your matchmaking skills are at peak performance levels both in helping to staff workplace teams for upcoming projects and for bringing people together on a more personal basis.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You're finally seeing some progress with your new venture. But be prepared for it to continue at a slower pace than you're used to. Meanwhile, a loved one could be preparing a surprise.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A family member's success pulls you into the spotlight as well. Enjoy it, but don't let it overshadow or otherwise obstruct what you're doing with your own creative projects.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Using what you already know might not be quite enough to get a proposed project off the ground. Look for any new information that might help tilt the scales in your favor.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Good news: While a changing workplace environment can be daunting for some, it could be the challenge you've been hoping for. If so, confront it with confidence and move on.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) It's a good time to recheck travel arrangements for any changes that could work to your advantage. Aspects also favor strengthening and restoring old, fraying relationships.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Using your intuitive reasoning helps you cut right through the double-talk and go straight to what's really going on around you. Stay the course until all your questions are answered.
BORN THIS WEEK: You radiate light and warmth, and others love being close to you.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- "Game of Thrones" stars have moved on. Richard Madden, who scored big as Elton John's lover in "Rocketman," is up next in Sam Mendes' "1917," with Benedict Cumberbatch and Colin Firth. Though the 33-year-old Scotsman played a gay man in "Rocketman," he prefers not to discuss his private life and has been dogged by the press, who think his relationship with his "out" gay actor roommate and constant companion, 25-year-old Brandon Flynn (who recurred in HBO's "True Detective" and the Netflix series "13 Reasons Why"), are more than "just friends."

Emilia Clarke stars with Henry Golding and Emma Thompson in "Last Christmas" (in theaters Nov. 8) and "Above Suspicion," with Jack Huston. Sophie Turner, late of "Dark Phoenix," who recently became Mrs. Joe Jonas (of the Jonas Brothers), stars in "Broken Soldier," with Ray Liotta and Mark Kassen. Nikolaj Coster-Waldau has made two films in his native Scandinavia: "Suicide Tourist" and "Notat." Peter Dinklage is next in the animated feature "The Croods 2" (out Sept. 8, 2020).

Kit Harington, who came away from "Thrones" as the biggest star, must have had the greatest pressure, because he used his break to enter a treatment center to work on personal issues. Could those "issues" be because of his "Game of Thrones" co-star Rose Leslie, whom he wed in June 2018, or overmedicating?

"Slumdog Millionaire" Oscar-winning director Danny Boyle, who also directed the current Beatles songfest "Yesterday," is touting Robert Pattinson to become 007 after Daniel Craig completes his second of the two current Bond films. Problem is that Pattinson just signed to play Batman, and Boyle quit directing the current Bond films due to creative differences.

George Clooney, currently in the Hulu series "Catch 22," has signed with Netflix to direct and star in the post-apocalyptic film "Good Morning, Midnight," about a lonely arctic scientist who tries to make contact with the crew of a spacecraft as it returns to Earth.

The original Agatha Christie hit "Death on the Nile" (1978) starred Peter Ustinov (as Hercule Poirot), Maggie Smith, Angela Lansbury, Bette Davis, Mia Farrow, David Niven and George Kennedy, but the remake stars only director Kenneth Branagh (as Poirot), with Armie Hammer, "Wonder Woman" Gal Gadot and some unknowns. Branagh's other Christie remake, "Murder on the Orient Express," grabbed $363 million. Can he do it again with this cast?

Ryan Murphy and Netflix have united to bring the Tony Award-winning cast of the 50th anniversary production of "The Boys in the Band" -- starring Jim Parsons, Zachary Quinto, Andrew Rannells and Matt Bomer -- to movie and TV screens. Spoiler alert: It has no band and is not a musical, but they're all very funny and light ... in their loafers!

KOVELS' Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Glass Pyramid --- A 4 1/2-inch-high heavy glass pyramid was in a recent house sale. It was inexpensive, but no one knew what it was used for. It was almost too heavy to lift, so it wouldn't be a practical paperweight, but we bought it to display on a table with our obelisks. A long search of pictures online revealed what it is ... a "deck prism." It was used to give extra light to parts of an antique sailing ship that were below the waterline. The first deck prisms were used about 1840. Fire was the best source of light, but it also was very dangerous on a wooden ship, so oil, kerosene lamps and candles were avoided.

My prism was inserted upside down into a hole on the main deck. The glass pyramid point hung down and shed some light into the room below. The base of the prism, now at the top, was set flush into the wooden deck. After a while, the caulking that held the glass would leak and the glass could chip, so the prism was carefully remounted and caulked. In 1861 a patented threaded light that could be screwed into a metal frame was invented, so prisms lost favor. But reproductions in colored glass still are made and used, and old ones are collected. They usually sell for less than $50.

Q: I have my great-grandfather's accordion, a pre-1900 Hohner two-row button diatonic. It was appraised, and I was told it would fetch four figures. I'd love to keep it, but no one in my family wants it. It's normal fifth scalar organization, 20 plus treble buttons and 12 bass buttons in very good condition. Where should I start?

A: You probably will get the highest price by selling the accordion at an auction of other antique musical instruments. Expect to pay the auction gallery a commission, a percentage of the hammer price. Fees are negotiable. Find out in advance what costs are and what it includes. Will the instrument be pictured in a catalog? What is the cost of shipping it to the auction? Insurance? Do you want a minimum bid? What are costs to you if it doesn't sell? You also can try a music store in your area. They may know someone who collects vintage instruments.

Strange BUT TRUE

* "When you go to the pool, make sure you take a sealable baggie to protect your cellphone. You can use the touchscreen through the plastic, and it's less likely to get wet. However, this doesn't take the place of a sealable water bag if you're going IN the water." -- G. in Virginia

* According to the experts from REI, here's a double-duty tip for your Nalgene water bottle. After helping you stay hydrated all day hiking, fill your bottle with hot water just before you retire for the night, and pop it down in the bottom of your sleeping bag after sealing well. It's a nice bit of warmth for your toes!

* "We recently went tubing, and here's a genius thing we saw: A laundry bag was secured to a small ring float, which was tied behind the other tubes like a little caboose. It held canned drinks and water bottles. The water kept them super cold, and empty cans went right back in the bag, zipped securely away." -- C.W. in Florida

HELPING HANDS – A few dozen volunteers teamed up last Saturday to take down the 400 American flags at Flags for Veterans Island located at School and Pleasant Streets, Fort Square, Quincy. The removed flags are in storage for the summer. They will be reinstalled on Columbus Day, Oct. 14th a few weeks before the Sons of The American Legion, Squadron 294, holds its annual Veterans Day observance. The observance will be held Sunday, Nov. 3.

A Job Well Done

your pockets if they try to follow you. More often than not they'll move on to their next victim.

THE RING SCAM: This is not a new scam but has multiple variations. The scammer approaches the victim discreetly and points to a ring (or other piece of jewelry) on the ground. The scammer will pick it up and try to convince you that it is yours and demand a reward. If this doesn't work, the scammer may try to convince you that the item is of great value and be willing to sell it at a discounted price.

MOTOR BIKE/JET SKI RENTAL DAMAGE: Many renters of this equipment require that you leave your passport as a deposit, which is common. The scam begins when you return the car/bike/jet ski and are told that you've caused significant damage to it. The scammer will refuse to give you back your passport unless payment is made. Always check over the rental and point out damages prior to taking possession, have it documented and then be sure to keep a copy.

THE BAR SCAM: Male travelers are particularly sought after for this one!

You land in a new country and unexpectedly receive non-stop attention in a bar or nightclub. After a fun evening and racking up a hefty bar tab, your new drinking partner is suddenly nowhere to be seen. Now you are left to pay the bill.

The drinking partner may also be in cahoots with the bar and/or bartender, who overcharges the victim, leaving you with a very high bill!

SHOE SHINE SCAM: If you are in Istanbul then pay special attention to this scenario. A shoe-shiner walks past you and drops a brush and you pick it up for him. To show gratitude, the shoe-shiner will start to clean your shoes. This may seem like a nice gesture but chances are high that they will then demand payment. Refusal could mean being surrounded by the city's entire shoeshine community. Ignore the brush!

TAXI SCAMS – There are many scams and may depend on the country you are in. One scam is to be told that the meter is broken the moment you leave an airport or bus/terminal and then be quoted an astronomical price at the end of the ride. Another scam is your driver getting lost on purpose in order for the meter to keep ticking for a few extra miles. Extreme cases might see a driver speed off with your luggage still inside the car. A South American favorite is to be informed that you have paid with fake bills. When you ask for the money back the driver will give a different bill (the actually fake one); you say sorry, hand over a new one and end up paying double.

Try to negotiate a fare before embarking on long journeys. Order a taxi by phone/internet or take one from official ranks, where possible. Glimpse at the serial number of your bill before handing it over, and count out the money aloud as you hand over the bills. It might seem like a lot to remember, but you'd rather be prepared than caught unawares.

THE BIRD POOP SCAM – Also affectionately called the sh on the shoe scam, this is another common trick to watch out for in busy tourist areas. As always seems to be the case, a jovial bystander will let you know that you have some bird poop/ketchup/mud on your shoe/sock/leg and offer you a tissue to clean it with. As you both bend to inspect the mess, a crafty hand will try and pluck any valuable items from your pocket/bag.

Even if you do have some mess on you, politely decline the offer of help and wait until you find a restroom or place to sit down alone.

THE CLOSED OR OVERBOOKED HOTEL: Taxi driver strikes again here. While driving to your accommodation, the driver will do their best to convince you that it no longer exists or is full to capacity. If you take their word then they'll whisk you off to another place, which is likely to be more expensive and owned by one of their friends/accomplices. After you check in, the cabbie will depart with a nice commission.

Contact your hotel prior to arrival to confirm your booking and to find out if they offer a pick-up service. And think to yourself, how would a taxi driver know if a specific hotel is overbooked or not?

THE TUMBLING WOMAN – or man takes what appears to be a serious fall in front of you. Passersby's stop to help and a crowd forms. This is possibly a set up for a pick pocket or as a diversion to stealing your bags. Make sure your items are secure so you can help the fallen person without fear of thievery.

Quincy College Launches Cyber Security Concentration

Quincy College with campuses in Quincy and Plymouth will launch a new cyber security concentration this fall as part of the college's Associate in Science Degree in Computer Science. The program is full-time with day and evening classes offered on the Quincy Campus.

Cyber security is a field that involves protecting the confidentiality, integrity and availability of information and is in the news nearly every day. The new concentration evolved from the Quincy College Associate in Science Degree in Computer Science reflecting the industry need for skilled professionals with a background in data privacy and information security.

"The Quincy College Cyber Security program is an interdisciplinary associate's degree program incorporating business, networking, law, and computer programming courses for individuals preparing for a career in cyber security. It's a natural extension of Quincy College's Computer Science Certificate and Associate Degree programs," said Gerald Koocher, Provost and Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs at Quincy College.

An intersection of computer science, business, law, and criminal justice, the new Cyber Security concentration offered at Quincy College prepares graduates for careers as Network Administrators, Computer Support Administrators, and Computer Support Specialists, and Security Analysts.

In addition to general education requirements, students in the cyber security concentration are expected to compete classes like computer forensics, computer systems security, cyber law, with electives like abnormal psychology, corporate security investigations, and white-collar crime.

"Cyber Security is rewarding and robust field full of opportunities for Quincy College graduates, said Quincy College Assistant Professor of Computer Science and Quincy College alumnus, James Peters.

"Cyber Security professionals can work in nearly every industry, providing security assessment, mitigating cyber threats, managing the technical security of a network via firewalls, encryption, and web servers or guiding an investigation into a security incident, using forensic data," Peters added.

In addition to the Associate in Science Degree in Computer Science - cyber security concentration, Quincy College also offers a network or programming concentration.

Cremation Jewelry Offers the Comfort of Permanent Memorialization

The Human Need for Memorialization

Funeral ceremonies are designed to help us not only acknowledge the reality of death and the emotions that arise at this time, to celebrate the unique life that was lived, and to allow family and friends to gather together to share memories and support; but also to satisfy our very human need for memorializing and remembering. The things we do to memorialize those who we have lost are how we move from the sadness of grief through the portal of remembrance to that space where our loved one lives on in our memory forever. Memorial jewelry can offer that sense of living memory.

Memorial Jewelry is Not New

Memorial jewelry is actually not new. Archeologists have found jewelry made from bones and teeth which may have been used in remembrance or for other rituals associated with honoring the dead. Mourning rings were a popular trend in the 17th and 18th centuries, often inscribed with the name of the deceased. Mourning jewelry was popular in the Victorian Age and Queen Victoria was known for wearing black jewelry after the death of her husband, Prince Albert. Hair was often woven into rings, bracelets and other items to invoke the memory of a loved one.

Today, cremation jewelry can be made from the materials left over from the cremation process, and for many, this offers a meaningful, flexible, affordable, and often beautiful way not only to honor one who has died, but to keep them close at heart always. And many small pieces can be created so that all survivors in a family can often each have a keepsake of their own. And, often, you can still scatter the remainder in a location special to you and your loved one.

So Many Options to Choose From

You can choose from a wide variety of designs, precious or non-precious metals, and the addition of a variety of stones. There are pendants bracelets and rings. One popular choice is to have a single bead made which is then incorporated into a piece of jewelry made of other beads. Others choose to have glass pendants or other pieces made from the remains, or to have them included in paperweights, stained glass and more. And then there are the diamonds! Man-made diamonds can have the remains of a loved one incorporated into the carbon that is used to create the diamond, which can then be used to create any type of jewelry you wish.

We Can Help

With so many choices and options, it is important to focus on what is important and meaningful to you. The cremation experts at Keohane are committed to helping you learn about the options and make the selections that are best for you and your family. Please call us at 1-800-KEOHANE. 1686 Quincy Homestead Open For Tours Saturday

History Spotlight Includes The Bethel, Treasure Chests

The 1686 Quincy Homestead, located at 34 Butler Rd. on the corner of Hancock Street, Quincy, will be open for public tours Saturday, July 20 from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The last tour of the day begins at 2 p.m.

Visitors will be welcomed to the Homestead by an all-volunteer staff eager to share the history of Quincy Homestead. Part of the history includes the following event.

In the summer of 1748, the Bethel privateer partly owned by Edmund Quincy IV sailed up Boston Harbor in triumph with a loot of 161 chests of silver and 2 chests of gold from the Spanish treasure ship. The chests of gold and silver coins were escorted through the streets by sailors armed with pistols and cutlasses, to Josiah's

Quincy house, where they were deposited in the wine cellar, and guard mounted over them by day and night while they remained there. Was this loot legal? Find out how the good name of the Quincy family remained as respectable as ever after this fortunate incident.

Did the Bethel engage in piracy? At nightfall in the Atlantic Ocean, the Bethel accidentally came upon the much larger and more heavily armed Spanish ship. Escape was impossible; so, instead of attempting it, the Bethel gave chase to the larger but leaky ship and demanded that it surrender.

The bold Captain Freeman had all the spare coats and hats available disposed so as to make the enemy believe that his ship was full of men. Lanterns were hung in the rigging and six wooden guns were placed to look as formidable as the 14 real ones that armed the small vessel. Mistaking the Bethel for a British sloop-of-war in the cover of the night, the Spanish ship surrendered without a fight. The prize removed from the Spanish ship made Edmund Quincy IV and his partners among the richest men in the colonies. What happened to Edmund's fortune? Learn about his reversal of fortune and the fate of the Quincy Homestead in the years that followed.

Tours take about 45 minutes. There is no admission charge for the tours, but as a non-profit 501 (c) (3) organization, donations are always welcome.

Discover Historic New England: Josiah Quincy Jr., American Spy

Accompanying Walk At Josiah Quincy House July 27

The public is welcome to learn about Josiah Quincy, Jr. Tuesday, July 23 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 80 Washington St., Quincy.

The program is part of the library's ongoing Discover Historic New England series.

The Quincy family had a great impact on the birth of nation, producing three mayors of Boston, a president of Harvard, and so much more. Come learn about Josiah Quincy Jr.'s role in the American Revolution. A defense attorney for the British following the Boston Massacre (arguing against his older brother, Samuel as the prosecuting attorney), Josiah later helped establish inter-colonial Committees of Correspondence, which lay the groundwork for the meeting of the First Continental Congress. He died on a return visit from a mission to Great Britain to retrieve information to assist the colonies. Come to the program to learn more about his fascinating but brief life from Janet Uhlar, an author of two historical accounts of the American Revolution and a work of fiction based on her research about Whitely Bulger.

An accompanying walking tour of the Josiah Quincy House and surrounding neighborhood will take place on Saturday, July 27. Join Sally Owen and Patti Williams on a walking tour of the Wollaston neighborhood surrounding the Quincy House.

Using historic documents, maps, illustrations, and photographs, the walk will reconstruct the historic landscape to the period when four generations of Quincys occupied hundreds of acres. The tour will depart from Quincy House, 20 Muirhead St., Quincy. An optional tour of Quincy House (1770) will follow the walk. T

Rain date for the walk is Sunday, July 28 at 2 p.m.

Co-sponsored by the Quincy Park Department Environmental Treasures Program. For more information, visit thomascranelibrary.org or call 617-376-1300, x3.

The 1686 Quincy Homestead, located at 34 Butler Rd. on the corner of Hancock Street, Quincy, will be open for public tours Saturday, July 20 from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The last tour of the day begins at 2 p.m.

Visitors will be welcomed to the Homestead by an all-volunteer staff eager to share the history of Quincy Homestead. Part of the history includes the following event.

In the summer of 1748, the Bethel privateer partly owned by Edmund Quincy IV sailed up Boston Harbor in triumph with a loot of 161 chests of silver and 2 chests of gold from the Spanish treasure ship. The chests of gold and silver coins were escorted through the streets by sailors armed with pistols and cutlasses, to Josiah's

Quincy house, where they were deposited in the wine cellar, and guard mounted over them by day and night while they remained there. Was this loot legal? Find out how the good name of the Quincy family remained as respectable as ever after this fortunate incident.

Did the Bethel engage in piracy? At nightfall in the Atlantic Ocean, the Bethel accidentally came upon the much larger and more heavily armed Spanish ship. Escape was impossible; so, instead of attempting it, the Bethel gave chase to the larger but leaky ship and demanded that it surrender.

The bold Captain Freeman had all the spare coats and hats available disposed so as to make the enemy believe that his ship was full of men. Lanterns were hung in the rigging and six wooden guns were placed to look as formidable as the 14 real ones that armed the small vessel. Mistaking the Bethel for a British sloop-of-war in the cover of the night, the Spanish ship surrendered without a fight. The prize removed from the Spanish ship made Edmund Quincy IV and his partners among the richest men in the colonies. What happened to Edmund's fortune? Learn about his reversal of fortune and the fate of the Quincy Homestead in the years that followed.

Tours take about 45 minutes. There is no admission charge for the tours, but as a non-profit 501 (c) (3) organization, donations are always welcome.

Discover Historic New England: Josiah Quincy Jr., American Spy

Accompanying Walk At Josiah Quincy House July 27

The public is welcome to learn about Josiah Quincy, Jr. Tuesday, July 23 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 80 Washington St., Quincy.

The program is part of the library's ongoing Discover Historic New England series.

The Quincy family had a great impact on the birth of nation, producing three mayors of Boston, a president of Harvard, and so much more. Come learn about Josiah Quincy Jr.'s role in the American Revolution. A defense attorney for the British following the Boston Massacre (arguing against his older brother, Samuel as the prosecuting attorney), Josiah later helped establish inter-colonial Committees of Correspondence, which lay the groundwork for the meeting of the First Continental Congress. He died on a return visit from a mission to Great Britain to retrieve information to assist the colonies. Come to the program to learn more about his fascinating but brief life from Janet Uhlar, an author of two historical accounts of the American Revolution and a work of fiction based on her research about Whitey Bulger.

An accompanying walking tour of the Josiah Quincy House and surrounding neighborhood will take place on Saturday, July 27. Join Sally Owen and Patti Williams on a walking tour of the Wollaston neighborhood surrounding the Quincy House.

Using historic documents, maps, illustrations, and photographs, the walk will reconstruct the historic landscape to the period when four generations of Quincys occupied hundreds of acres. The tour will depart from Quincy House, 20 Muirhead St., Quincy. An optional tour of Quincy House (1770) will follow the walk. T

Rain date for the walk is Sunday, July 28 at 2 p.m.
